Talmadge Takes Lead Of 3 to 1 in Unit Votes

Atlanta, Sept. 8 (AP).—One of Georgia's foremost champions of "white supremacy," Herman Talmadge, held a three-to-one lead over Gov. M. E. Thompson tonight in their race for the governorship.

Early incomplete returns in today's Democratic primary, marked by scattered efforts to intimidate Negro voters, gave Talmadge 264 indicated unit votes to 72 for Thompson, a former schoolteacher. Returns were from 676 of 1763 precincts.

Talmadge's popular vote was 99,050; Thompson's 82,371.

These returns were from 128 of 159 counties.

In Georgia, the county unit system, roughly akin to the Electoral College, determines the Democratic nominee for Governor (and victory in the primary means election in one-party Georgia). A majority of the county unit votes, or 206, is required. The county votes are allotted on the basis of six to the big counties, four to smaller counties and two to the sparsely populated rural counties.

All three incumbents in contest congressional races apparently were being returned to office on the basis of early returns.

Representative Eugene Cox of the Second District had 28 unit votes to none for J. Neely Peacock, Albany attorney, and led in the popular vote by 4333 to 1033.

Representative W. M. Wheeler led two opponents in the Eighth District, while Representative James Davis apparently was sweeping the Fifth (Atlanta) District. He was opposed by Helen Douglas Mankin, former Congresswoman, and W. C. Lowe.

Georgia's other seven Congressmen were unopposed along with United States Senator Richard B. Russell.

Reports drifted in of cross burnings by the Ku Klux Klan, Negro vote purges and attempts to slow down Negro voting.

On the eve of the election huge crosses, the trademark of the KKK, flamed in three counties and one Negro reported a band of hooded men left a miniature casket on his doorstep.

The Griffin Daily News reported that 558 Negro registrants had been stricken from the vote list on the eve of the primary.

In populous Richmond County, the Augusta Herald charged polling officials in some places were permitting Negroes to vote at the rate of only three every hour.

Earthquake Felt Near Fiji Islands; No Damage Likely

Honolulu, Sept. 8 (AP).—A "very strong" earthquake shock apparently spent its force today on the ocean floor about 600 miles east of the Fiji Islands.

United States Army Intelligence said it had received a report from Nandi, in the Fijis nearest the quake's epicenter, that a "moderate" shock was felt but there was no damage.

[The disturbance was recorded on the seismograph at Georgetown University, lasting nearly three hours, and reaching a maximum motion at 12:33 p. m. The disturbance was about 7590 miles from Washington.]

N. Y. Employes Like Dewey's Conference Idea, Pay Policies

(Editor's Note: This is the third of a series. To find out what kind of a boss Thomas E. Dewey would be to 2,200,000 Federal workers, Jerry Kluttz interviewed New York State employes, their organization leaders, supervisors and civil service officials, at Albany. The fourth article will appear in The Washington Post Friday.)

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Governor Dewey has received few tributes that pleased him more that a recent one from a representative group of New York State employes. The praise was summed up in these words:

"Dewey has been an outstanding Governor and a good boss to work for. No higher tribute can be paid by any employe."

After all, there is no better way to find out what kind of a boss any person is than to ask the people who work for him. Although some employes and their groups oppose Dewey and just about everything he has done, the above accolade is considered the view of the average employe.

It was carried in a recent edition of Merit, the official publication of the Civil Service Employes Association, the one truly representative group of State employes. The nonpartisan and independent association has a membership of more than 40,000 of the State's 60,000 employes.

The association couldn't be called a Dewey mouthpiece by any stretch of imagination. If it had a favorite Governor it was a Democrat, Herbert Lehman, whom it refers to repeatedly as a "Civil Service Governor." The big employe group has had any number of running fights with Dewey on employe problems; it believes he could have done much more to help State workers and to strengthen Civil Service, but by and large it's grateful for the employ progress that has been made under his administrations.

Therefore the tribute to Dewey from the No. 1 employe group in New York State carries real meaning.

The association is especially thankful to Dewey for the introduction of the conference method for settling employe problems—a method where the administration and employe groups sit down at the same table to thrash out problems before policy decisions are made.

Governor Dewey explained his conference plan in these words to an association meeting about a year ago:

"It is, however, fundamental that the State should, before launching on a course affecting its public servants, discuss this course with the public servants. It ought

Dewey Plans To Ignore Truman Talks

'Silent Treatment' Strategy Will Leave Replies to Others

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Unless personally attacked, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey will give President Truman "the silent treatment" in the coming campaign.

Despite plans announced today to follow the President into Iowa for the September 20 opening of Dewey's campaign in Des Moines, the Governor of New York will largely ignore what Mr. Truman has to say and refuse to "rough it" with him.

Dewey plans to present his own case to the country in his own way in a "high level" campaign and, for the most part, let other Republicans of recognized party status

District 'Seizes' Bottle Club for Overdue Taxes

The Spotlight Guild, Inc., 1154 17th st. nw., one of three after hours "bottle" clubs raided last month, has been "seized" by the District government for nonpayment of $515 in personal property taxes.

The taxes are owed by Vincent Grillo, club president, for last year and this year, Collector of Taxes Guy W. Pearson said yesterday.

The furniture and fixtures of the club were taken over last Friday after delinquency notices sent to Grillo went unanswered, Pearson said.

Representatives from Pearson's office padlocked the club. Pearson said he was informed by Grillo that his lease on the club location expires next Wednesday and that he had no intention of renewing it.

Woman, 91, Burns to Death, 5 Rescued in Maryland Fire

A 91-year-old woman was burned to death but five other elderly persons were carried to safety when fire swept through a boarding home last night at Travilah, Md., 8 miles west of Rockville.

The dead woman was identified by Montgomery County police as Mrs. Ida Presgrave. She was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Frank J. Broschart, county medical examiner.

A District policeman and his friend were responsible for saving the lives of the five other residents of the home for aged persons.

Eighth Precinct Pvt. Edwin L. York of 5908 8th st. nw. and Lew Kekenes of 1400 Staples st. ne. noticed smoke spiraling from the two-story frame and stucco dwelling at about 7:45 p. m. while they were picnicking nearby.

They rushed inside the house and carried to safety Mrs. Evelyn Davis, about 70; Milton Cissell, 83; George Currier, 94; Louis Cowan, 82, and a Mrs. Boight, 70.

The five were uninjured and were taken to the Pine View Rest Home at Potomac, Md., for temporary refuge.

Reserve Rate Increased For Banks

Action of Board Intended to Check Threat of Inflation In Loan Expansion

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday raised the reserve requirement of member banks in a new step aimed at "restraining inflationary expansion" of bank loans.

Banks were ordered to put aside an additional 2 per cent of money deposited with them in checking accounts and 1½ per cent of their time deposits. The requirements will be effective September 16 in some cases and September 24 in others.

The effect will be to force banks to hand over to the Federal Reserve an estimated $1,900,000,000 that otherwise could be used for making loans. Theoretically, that much in bank assets could serve as the basis for a potential 12-billion-dollar increase in loan totals since it is figured banks can lend as much as $6 on each $1 they hold.

Federal Reserve officials, however, expect banks for the most part to raise the extra reserves by selling their holdings of Government bonds.

The Federal Reserve System itself is committed to buy all Government bonds offered at their face value or higher. This is to keep prices of the bonds at par so that the Government will not have to pay more than 2½ per cent—the current rate—in interest on its borrowing.

The reserve increase ordered by the board on checking account deposits is only half as much as was authorized by the recent special session of Congress as a means of combating inflation by putting a damper on bank lending.

Nevertheless, the importance of this loan-tightening action was rated so high by the board that it withheld its announcement until stock exchanges had closed across the country from the East to the West Coasts.

The board's order increased the amount of reserves required as follows:

On demand (checking accounts) deposits — for "country" banks, from 14 to 16 per cent, effective September 16; for "reserve city" (most big city institutions) from 20 to 22 per cent, effective September 24; and for New York and Chicago banks from 24 to 26 per cent, effective September 24.

For time deposits—from 6 to 7½ per cent for all banks. The increase is effective September 16 in the case of "country banks" and September 24 for other banks.

The new time deposit reserve requirement is the maximum allowed by law. The demand deposit requirement remains 4 per cent below the maximum for New York and Chicago banks and 2 per cent below the ceiling for banks elsewhere.

The increases will lift the required reserves of banks in New York and Chicago by about 500 million dollars. Required reserves in other major cities will go up about 700 million dollars and in

De Gaulle's Ex-Aide Gets Premiership

Queuille, Veteran Centrist, Named After Aged Herriot Turns Down Offer

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Sept. 8 (NYHT).—President Vincent Auriol, in a desperate attempt to find a man capable of forming a French government, picked Henri Queuille, a veteran Radical Socialist, this afternoon to succeed Robert Schuman as Premier.

Schuman and his two-day-old cabinet resigned yesterday when they were unable to obtain a majority in Parliament and President Auriol's first choice to replace him—Edouard Herriot, president of the National Assembly—refused the assignment.

The task of bringing order out of political confusion and economic turmoil fell then upon Queuille, a little-known political leader who has held 16 minor cabinet posts over a period of 23 years. He is 64 years old, a war-time assistant of Gen. Charles de Gaulle and a deputy from the Brittany coast.

Ill Health Excuses Herriot

His job is to organize a cabinet and develop an economic program that can win the approval of Parliament and thereby put an end to the crisis that has brought down three governments in the last seven weeks.

Herriot turned down President Auriol's offer on two grounds—first, because he believed it was his duty to continue as president of the National Assembly, and second, because of age and ill-health. He is 76 years old and suffers from phlebitis.

Once the offer was rejected, President Auriol hastily called in Queuille (pronounced something like "cuh-ee-yuh" with the "u" as a short vowel). He was determined to act forcefully to quiet talk of dissolution of the National Assembly and new national elections—now heard from many quarters in the belief that no individual or group can obtain a working majority.

Queuille Excludes Reds

Queuille tonight was talking to every shade of political opinion in the assembly except the Communists. He has a chance.

Fear of national elections should bring the Socialists and Popular Republicans into line. His own Radical Socialist group, which split yesterday to cause Schuman's downfall, may be counted upon to support him. He is trying to get the followers of General de Gaulle to give him a chance.

Throughout the confusion of these weeks there is little doubt but that the door is being slowly opened for a return to power of De Gaulle himself. The center parties—or most of them—would like to slam it before it is too late. To succeed, however, they must form a stable government, satisfy some of the demands of organized labor without hopelessly wrecking the country's finances, and force down rising food prices.

Repeated failures are producing a call for elections (which De Gaulle would welcome). This afternoon 21 members of the Council of the Republic, including 10 Popular Republicans, told President Auriol this was the only way out.

About the same time Louis Christiaens, head of the Assembly's

Area Pupil Rolls Set Record; School 'Equalization' Tested

King George Negroes To Seek Entry Today To White Institution

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

King George, Va., Sept. 8.—In Virginia's first test of a Federal order to equalize white and Negro school facilities, parents today refused to let their children register for classes at the main Negro school in King George County.

Negro leaders of the equalization fight plan to present "eight or ten" Negro pupils for registration at the all-white King George County High School Thursday morning, although neither white nor Negro leaders expect them to be registered.

While there appears to be mounting race tension in this small county seat, both sides in the dispute have announced that they expect no violence of any kind.

If registration of Negro pupils is refused at the white school, the Negro children will then register at their own school Thursday and contempt of court action will be sought against school officials here on ground that they violated a Federal Court order, said Martin A. Martin, leading Negro attorney in the fight.

New Student Flood Impact Is Felt as Doors Open Here

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Washington area schools yesterday began to feel the impact of the flood of new students.

For at least one section the wave exceeded the superintendent's direst predictions. But wherever students entered school or registered for classes there was proof that this is a record year.

In Prince Georges, where students returned to classes, Superintendent G. Gardner Shugart said that indications were that the enrollment will top the expected 23,500.

In Alexandria, where public schools got under way, Superintendent T. C. Williams estimated the enrollment at 7000 pupils, approximately 300 more than attended last year.

In the District, school officials announced that students at the Negro Cardozo High School will attend classes on staggered hours so that the school with a capacity of 1040 students can accommodate 1825.

Dr. Carl Hansen, associate superintendent, said that when schools open on Monday six elementary schools will be on part-time programs. A year ago the District

Soviets Reject Protest By French on Kidnap Of 19 Berlin Police

Marshall Says Berlin Riots Aimed at Four-Power Talks

Secretary Marshall yesterday blamed Communist groups inside and outside Germany for inciting this week's kidnapings and other acts of violence at the Berlin City Hall.

The chief object of these tactics, he told his press conference, was to break up the four-power discussions now going on in Berlin over the currency problem and the lifting of the Soviet blockade.

He said these acts of violence in the midst of negotiations recalled similar tactics in the past, and must be firmly resisted. But he declined to say what form the Western powers' resistance would take.

The Secretary spoke after he had gone to the Pentagon Building to get an up-to-the-minute report from defense chiefs on the situation in Berlin and, it was understood, on the strength of American forces there.

The Secretary said he had hoped and requested that everything possible be done to let the talks of the four military governors proceed in a quiet atmosphere. Instead, he said, just the reverse had happened.

He seemed satisfied that the City Hall disorders had not succeeded in upsetting the four-power conferences. And he gave high praise to the members of the Berlin municipal government for what he called their careful restraint in the face of violence.

The Berlin leaders are to be commended, he said, for their efforts to proceed in democratic fashion.

U. S. Holds Russia To Blame for Riots And Demonstrations In City Hall

Berlin (Thursday), Sept. 9 (AP).—The Soviets rejected early today a French protest of the "double-cross" kidnap of 19 western Berlin policemen.

The French protest, made by Maj. Gen. Roget Noiret, deputy French commander in Berlin, demanded the release of the 19 Germans. They were snatched at dawn yesterday by Russian machine-gunners and eastern sector Berlin police while traveling under a Soviet safe conduct guarantee from the besieged City Hall.

The Russian deputy commander, Lieut. Gen. M. I. Dratvin, replied to Noiret in a letter published tonight by the Soviet news bureau.

The French protest coincided with an American protest to the Russians against Communist disorders at the City Hall climaxed by the mass kidnaping. The American commandant, Col. Frank Howley, sent the protest to his opposite number, Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov.

Howley condemned the recent Communist-led demonstration and riots which Allied officials have described as part of a Communist plot to force the elected, anti-Communist city government out of power.

Howley said the "blame rests on the Russians."

The Soviet news bureau quoted Dratvin as replying to Noiret that the incident was "not in the competence of the Soviet command for Berlin." Witnesses said the French trucks evacuating the 19 Germans and several Western Allies from City Hall were ambushed by Soviet-controlled German police backed by Russian troops.

Dratvin added that it was "a question for the Germans to solve through the city government or other appropriate administration offices."

The Russian's letter said the Soviet command "would like to avoid superfluous interference in the affairs of the city government and other administrative departments of the city unless there is

Colonies Talks Useless, U. S. Tells Russia

4-Power Disagreement Cited, But America Still Willing to Meet

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

The United States told Russia yesterday that because of four-power disagreements it would be a waste of time to hold a new conference on the future of the former Italian colonies in Africa.

Unless Russia has a new proposal to make, said an American note delivered to the Soviet Embassy here, it would be better simply to tell the Secretary-General of the United Nations that the four powers had tried and failed to agree.

This would put the troublesome issue squarely before the United Nations General Assembly, where 58 nations would have to deal with a question on which the four major wartime allies had found themselves in hopeless disagreement. The peace treaty with Italy provides that if the future of the colonies cannot be settled by the four powers by September 15 of this year it must be referred to the General Assembly.

The American note did say that Secretary Marshall would be willing to send "a duly qualified representative" to a four-power meeting on the subject if the other three were also willing.

The Russians had asked for an early meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers on the subject, and according to Radio Moscow last night had proposed holding it in Paris this Friday. The British government was willing, subject to agreement on the time and place.

44 Are Missing As Animal-Laden Circus Ship Sinks

Miami, Fla., Sept. 8 (AP).—Forty-four persons, most of them circus performers, are missing in the Caribbean Sea after their small ship—loaded with lions, tigers and other wild animals—overturned and sank in the early morning darkness of September 1.

A message today from the Norwegian motor vessel, Caribe, reported it had picked up 12 of 56 persons believed aboard the foreign ship Euzkera, in a lifeboat 770 miles south of Miami. The 12 included 3 crewmen and 9 passengers.

The 140-foot Euzkera of Honduran registry sank suddenly 130 miles off the Colombian coast, 200 miles from Panama and 700 miles from Miami. It was carrying the Razzore circus from Mariel, Cuba, to Cartagena, Colombia.

Pravda Calls Tito Ally of Imperialists

New Attack Shows No Change in Dispute Since Zhdanov Death

Moscow, Sept. 8 (AP).—Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party, charged today that Marshal Tito has joined the imperialists and is waging a terrorist campaign of "repressions, mass arrests and murders" against a majority of the Yugoslav Party.

Tito, the half-page editorial declared, represents only a minority faction of Yugoslav Communists and is using the state apparatus to "crush the will of the international majority" of the party.

The editorial was signed "Tseka" which means the central committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

(This sharpest editorial comment on Marshal Tito printed in the Soviet Union was significant since it came immediately after the death of Andrei A. Zhdanov, founder of the Cominform and principal author of the Cominform's attack on the Yugoslav leader.

(There had been speculation aboard that Zhdanov's death might bring about a patching up of the quarrel with Tito. The article, on the contrary, suggested that Tito is in for even rougher treatment yet at the hands of the Russian Communist leadership.)

Tito, said the editorial, had not drawn the "necessary conclusions" from the Cominform's resolution, and had failed to understand that his nationalist policy "leads to the loss of Yugoslavia's truest allies—the Communist parties of the world—and that this already has led to isolation of the Yugoslav Communist Party both inside and outside the nation."

The only way out, said the article, was for Tito and his adherents to make a "confession of mistakes" and "return to the family of Communist parties."

The Tito group "is afraid to confess them," however, the editorial continued, and "is presently in one general camp with the imperialists."

Pravda's editorial charged that "luxuriant phrases about friendship with the USSR" which were sounded at the recent Yugoslav Communist Party congress, were but a false screen intended to deceive, while the Tito group is engaged in "pouring filth" on other Communist parties.

Fear, Pain, Cold May Increase Arthritis, Physicians Declare

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Fear, pain, cold and perhaps smoking may aggravate or even cause arthritis, the Nation's leading physiatrists were told here yesterday by two University of Pennsylvania research specialists.

The possible causes and irritants were advanced by Dr. Steven M. Horvath, assistant professor of physical medicine, in his report on experiments in recording inner temperatures of inflamed and healthy knee joints.

Minute thermometers were inserted into inner recesses of the knees of four healthy volunteers and 21 arthritic patients in the special study recently completed by Dr. Horvath and Dr. Joseph L. Hollander, associate in physical medicine at the university's graduate school of medicine.

Their paper on effects of ice-packs, hot pads and other forms of heat treatment on diseased knee joints was presented in general scientific assembly of the American Congress of Physical Medicine, at the Hotel Statler. More than 400 physicians, surgeons and therapists were registered by the start of the four-day scientific sessions yesterday morning.

Bitter Election Foes Battle to End, But Echo Is That of Georgia's Ol' Gene

Down South in Georgia successful politicians share a common platform: they must favor white supremacy, and they must be for the plain people.

* * * * * * *

Thompson Talmadge

And so it is with "Hummon" (spelled Herman) Talmadge and "M. E." (for Melvin Ernest) Thompson, the gubernatorial rivals in yesterday's special election.

Nonpartisan observers say that while there is little difference in kind, the two political chieftains differ greatly in degree. "Hummon"—and incidentally, the klan—charge that Thompson is lukewarm in his advocacy of white supremacy. "M. E." retorts that "Hummon" is a rabble rouser on the race issue.

There's evidence in the personalities of the two men to support both charges.

Mark of the Teacher

Thompson is a lukewarm sort of individual. He started out as a teacher and he has that look about him which marks him as a teacher forevermore.

Talmadge is a deliberately friendly fellow. He booms a friendly greeting to callers. His personality lights up in the presence of people, and catches on fire among the plain people who elected his late father, "Ol' Gene," four tmes Governor. But "Hummon's" fire, unlike the spontaneous flame of his zealot sire, is turned on and off in firefly fashion, with the astute shrewdness of the polished politician.

But Thompson, too, for all his seeming sedateness, has a way with audiences. His principal vote-getting characteristic has been the ring of sincerity in his matter-of-fact speeches. In this race for the Governorship, egged on by his intense dislike for "Hummon"—a feeling returned with equal intensity—Thompson has erupted into a free-swinging style of stumping the hustings, something in the manner of Ol' Gene.

"Listen to me now! Listen to me now!" he cries, a direct if unconscious steal from Ol' Gene. And he refers to himself in the third person: "Let's look at M. E.'s record!" or "M. E.'s going to win this one!"

This switch in Thompson's oratorical delivery pleases his associates and annoys the Talmadge supporters. They ridicule his delivery and say that "M. E." stands for "Me Too."

Copies Dad's Style

Young "Hummon"—he's only 35—himself studiously copies the political trademarks of his colorful dad, even to wearing red galluses, chewing tobacco, and sporting an untameable black cowlick.

"M. E." Thompson is a native Georgian, son of a sharecropper, who worked his way through college as a waiter, attained a Ph. D., and climbed the academic ladder from teacher to assistant State superintendent of schools. Once he was fired by the elder Talmadge for lobbying in behalf of free school textbooks.

Thompson got into practical politics in 1943, campaigning for Ellis Arnall. He later served as State revenue commissioner, got elected as Lieutenant Governor, and when Gene Talmadge succumbed on the eve of his inauguration as Governor, became acting Governor by court decision, but only after "Hummon" had taken over the State Capitol for 63 days.

Today, at 45, Thompson stands at 5 feet 10, pushes 175 pounds, likes to hunt, fish, and golf. He's married to a Georgia peach, has a son, and is much the family man. He operates a gas and electrical appliance business on the side—of politics, that is.

The political career of "Hummon" began at the age of 8. Pappy Gene was running for his first State office, commissioner of agriculture, and "Hummon" participated in the campaign by distributing literature and asking votes for his dad.

There's always been a strong parental as well as political bond between Ol' Gene and his son. "Humon" followed in his father's footsteps, by entering the University of Georgia, joining Sigma Nu, taking law. He joined the elder Talmadge's law practice, and took over the management of the latter's political campaigns.

Served in Navy

"Hummon" stepped out of politics for four war years, serving with the Navy from Guadalcanal to Tokyo Bay, rising from ensign to lieutenant commander. Then he returned to his father's side, and Georgia politics. Only after his father's death in December 1946 did the son step into the political picture as a distinct personality.

Like his father, "Hummon" turns to the back country "wool trap" voters for his chief support; but unlike his father, "Hummon" also goes after the "beaver traps" of the cities and bigger towns. Thirty-five years old, 6 feet tall, an effective speaker who can be red-hot or urbane at will, "Hummon" is a colorful character in his own right, although a lesser one than his fire-eating father.

Married for the second time—like Thompson, to a Georgia peach—he is father of two sons, and likes to play ball with them at his mansion home in Lovejoy, outside Atlanta.

Thompson and Talmadge met once face to face in the gubernatorial race in a radio debate presented by the Atlanta Constitution. The two foes glowered at each other, verbally pummeled each other, and nearly went after each other physically. Both sides claimed victory in that great debate. Perhaps yesterday's vote provided the true answer.

Utah Governor To Face 1944 Rival

Salt Lake City, Sept. 8 (AP).—Utah's bitter governorship and First District congressional election contests of 1944 and 1946 will be repeated in November.

For the governorship, Democrat incumbent Herbert B. Maw will oppose Republican J. Bracken Lee, former Mayor of Price, in the general election after the two won their party's nominations in yesterday's primary election.

In the First District Congressional race, David J. Wilson of Ogden will oppose incumbent Walter K. Granger, Democrat, of Cedar City. Wilson's nomination was conceded by State Senator Mitchell Melich of Moab. Granger was unopposed in the primary.

Four years ago, Lee lost to Maw by 1046 after a recount threw out several thousand votes on technicalities and irregularities.

Two years ago Wilson lost to granger by 104 votes, and protested the results. An investigation by a House of Representatives Committee denied Wilson's protest but brought a charge of irregularities in voting procedures on both sides.

In the Second District, Mrs. Reva Beck Bosone won the Democratic nomination to oppose Representative William A. Dawson, Republican.

Thurmond Accepts In Texas

Dallas, Sept. 8 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina charged here tonight the Republicans, Democrats and Progressives borrowed their theories of government "from the cesspools of eastern Europe."

Accepting nomination as President bestowed on him today by the States Rights Democrats of Texas, Thurmond condemned the anti-lynching and anti-poll tax bills and the proposed Fair Employment Practice Commission.

"The proposed American FEPC," he said in a speech prepared for delivery, "which is the heart and core of the misnamed civil rights program, is nothing more than an American edition of the Russian all races law.

"I have here a copy of Stalin's celebrated all races law. Look at the emblem of Soviet Russia. Read it for yourself. Stalin himself wrote that law in 1920 when he was commissar of nationalities. Under that law there can be no discrimination in employment on account of race, color, national origin or ancestry.

"Did you ever dream that any one would undertake to force Americans to conform to this Russian idea and concept? I know you did not. But the attempt is now being made, not by Stalin, but by Wallace, by Dewey and by Truman."

The States' Rights Party of Texas was formally organized today. Thurmond and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi are presidential and vice presidential choices of the States' Rights Democrats movement.

Dixiecrats Win Place On N. Carolina Ballot

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 8 (AP).—A North Carolina Supreme Court decision today gave the States' Rights Democrats a place on the State's general election ballot.

The State's highest court upheld a lower court decision which ordered the State Board of Elections to place the States' Rights candidates on the ballot.

Garvey Extends Lead In Arizona Primary

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 8 (AP).—Acting Gov. Dan E. Garvey had extended his lead in the seven-man race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination to nearly 4000.

Returns from 370 of the 437 precincts in the State gave Garvey 19,453 and Representative Richard F. Harless, his nearest competitor, 15,648.

In third place was Jim Smith, Graham County rancher, with 13,620, while in fourth place was J. Melvin Goodson, former Speaker of the State House of Representatives and World War II veteran, with 12,067.

Representative John R. Murdock, running for the first time from a congressional district (No. 1), was assured of renomination by the Democrats for his seventh consecutive term in the House. Previously both Arizona Congressmen were elected at large.

In the Second Congressional District race Harold A. Patten, Tucson, was leading for the Democratic nomination with 10,222 votes to 7125 for Albert H. McKenzie, Prescott, his closest rival.

Barkley Blames East Europe For World Division in Blocs

Rome, Italy, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky told the Interparliamentary Union today that there would be no blocs in the world if the countries of eastern Europe had joined the Marshall Plan.

The Democratic vice presidential candidate pounded his clenched fist on the table as he emphasized that all of the eastern bloc nations were invited to adhere to the plan and none accepted.

As he placed the blame for the world division on the East, all of the western power delegates rose and applauded. The easterners sat in silence.

Refuting eastern charges that the United States had imperialistic aims, Barkley said:

"We in the United States have become accustomed to such accusations, but the Yalta and Potsdam agreements were made in good faith, and I know that we have not violated these accords.

"If there have been violations of these agreements, it is not the responsibility of the United States. I am not accusing any nation represented at this conference (Russia sent no delegation), but history will record all of the facts with honesty. I must, however, declare that I am disappointed that the Interparliamentary conference has been used for recriminations."

Barkley then recalled that the United States was ready to spend 17 billion dollars up to 1951 to help Europe.

At the conclusion of the 25-minute speech, Count Carlo Sforza, Italian Foreign Minister and host to the conference of 400 members of the world's parliaments, said that Barkley's address would "be listed as one of the most important and historical documents of the Interparliamentary Union."

The conference today approved 7 of 18 proposed principles of international morality contained in a resolution drafted by its judicial committee. They were:

1. States are governed by the moral principles of the governing individuals; (2) the United Nations eventually should assume "universal juridical expression" over all nations; (3) all states are equal before the law; (4) states have a "strict duty" to observe international conventions; (5) no state may judge its own cause in settling disputes by conciliation, arbitration or judicial procedure; (6) the independence of states is inviolable politically, economically and otherwise.

The seventh principle, amended by the British, opposed by the Bulgarians and approved by the conference, said, "No state may use its armed forces on the territory of another independent state except with the agreement of the state concerned or for military action authorized by the terms of the United Nations charter."

Consideration of the remaining 11 points was postponed. No meeting is scheduled Thursday, when delegates will be received by Pope Pius XII at his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo.

the $20,000 12-room house causing damage estimated at $5000.

According to police, the boarding home had been operated since last February by Mrs. Blanche O. Downey and her daughter, Mrs. Mary Virginia James.

Mrs. James was out of town last night and Mrs. Downey said she had gone to a drugstore in Rockville to obtain medicine for Mrs. Presgrave, the lone victim of the fire.

Mrs. Downey said when she left for Rockville, Mrs. Presgrave was sleeping on the first floor screened-in porch in the rear of the house. The porch was completely destroyed by the fire.

Mrs. Downey was unable to explain the origin of the fire. "It must have been a short circuit," she offered in explanation.

Mrs. Downey said she previously had operated a similar boarding home at 5800 Eastern ave. ne.

She leases the house from Morris Gorovich who operated a dairy farm there for several years. It is known in the neighborhood as the old Hatton Waters place.

Dewey Plans to Ignore Truman Talks in Campaign

handle any Truman diversionary moves.

Thus Harold Stassen slammed at Truman as a presidential "failure" in Detroit Tuesday. Following through, acting Senate Majority Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Neb.,) after a conference with Dewey here today, accused the President of using a "technique of fear."

This almost unparalleled reversal of Republican campaign methods in effect regards President Truman as the "challenger", and Governor Dewey as the challenged.

It explains Governor Dewey's complete silence on President Truman's Labor Day foray into Michigan and Ohio. It explains the delayed September 19 take-off of Dewey's campaign train from Albany and plans for a short, six weeks campaign.

Traditionally, it is the challenger"—the man with most to gain and least to lose—who first hops into the political ring and starts making the first passes.

Roosevelt Set Pace

Governor Dewey was in precisely that position in 1944 when he ran against the late Franklin Roosevelt—the all time three-term "champ."

In 1936 and 1949, Governor Landon and Wendell Willkie, their party nearly stripped of public office and backstop leaders, found themselves at an even greater disadvantage.

Landon, and to a lesser degree Willkie, spent much of the time replying to thrusts from Harry Hopkins, Harold Ickes, "Ma" Perkins and other leaders in the phalanx around Roosevelt.

It was true to a diminishing extant in 1944, with the added disadvantage that a war was on. President Roosevelt, the challenged, took it slow and steady, refused to let Dewey set the tempo of the race, and practically administered the "K. O." to Dewey in his delayed teamsters speech.

Roles Now Reversed

This time, say the top men around Dewey, the roles are reversed and it is the Governor of New York who wears the Golden Gloves and holds the winning odds.

More than that, his rejuvenated party, united as it has never been in any recent campaign, has a really solid bodyguard of top leaders ready to run interference. Stassen not only opened the Republican campaign in Detroit Tuesday night—his hotly worded rebuttal of Mr. Truman relieved Governor Dewey of making a personal reply. As the campaign goes on, other ace party spokesmen, such as Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Mich.) and Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) will play equally focal roles.

The decision on a late September opening for Dewey was entirely due to what GOP strategists consider the altered status of the two parties. The delayed announcement was partly due to a desire to perfect every campaign detail far in advance but keep the opposition "guessing." They say Dewey actually made his September 20 Des Moines date before President Truman scheduled his September 18 Dexter, Iowa, speech. Like the Democrats, they have announced no major appearances beyond Iowa beyond saying merely that Dewey will continue on to the coast.

Another Dewey Objective

Selection of Iowa for the GOP curtain-raiser points up another Dewey objective—concentration of his heaviest punches in the Senate-race States. In Iowa, former Senator Guy M. Gillette (D.) is threatening the present Republican incumbent, Senator George A. Wilson. Republicans still feel far more certain of a big presidential majority than they do of a safe Senate margin.

As for Dewey's delayed starter, his advisers here say they see little point in their candidate hopping immediately into the arena and flailing his arms before the country is aware there's a campaign on. In fact, they see no percentage in any Dewey arm-flailing at Truman at all, though he will certainly smack back if personally attacked.

Governor Dewey's present purpose is to take up the major policy issues facing the country and deal with each separately in what his friends described as a "high plane, constructive campaign."

In speeches positive and explicit in character, he will say what he thinks of each of the paramount problems, and what as President he would do to meet them. He will do very little harking back—thinks it's time to stop raking over the dead past. He may skip the prewar period altogether.

Extremists Don't Approve

This isn't exactly the kind of campaign extreme elements in his party want him to conduct. They would like to see him pounce on Harry Truman and "slaughter" him, in their own words. Some would even like to see the old Roosevelt record trotted out and torn to bits in yet another campaign post-mortem. As of this writing, they won't get their wish.

To take time out to answer every Truman sally would not only play directly into Democratic hands, it would let the President, not the Governor, determine the kind of campaign Dewey makes, say the strategists.

They say Mr. Dewey has enough skill and poise to present his case without letting Mr. Truman deflect him.

In fact, they say Mr. Truman doesn't want to run against Mr. Dewey at all but against the Eightieth Congress. Mr. Dewey already has indorsed the record of the Republican Congress in his acceptance speech and won't be drawn into an extensive debate on the subject.

Plainly, Mr. Truman is down for a big dose of silence, with a Dewey blackout more devastating than any other aspirant to the White House ever administered to an occupant.

To make it more complete, Governor Dewey may even eschew a direct attack on that favorite Republican target—the Pendergast machine. "We don't have to get down on that level," said one Dewey lieutenant.

Wherry Illustrates System

Senator Wherry's blast at Truman in Albany perfectly illustrated hof the system is planned to work. Senator Wherry flew here from Omaha to discuss campaign issues with Governor Dewey. Dewey personally continued silent but when Wherry came out of his office he freely aired his own views.

He said Truman in Michigan and Ohio employed "the fear technique—the system used by left wingers and rabble rousers."

"He (Truman) is telling the farmers, if you don't get in and vote for me, you won't get these benefits," said Wherry.

"The unions supporting him in Detroit compelled their members to attend his rally or pay a penalty." Wherry invited Governor Dewey to speak in Nebraska on his West Coast trip, and implied he will speak there. Nebraska is another Senate-race State and Dewey will concentrate in all of them. Wherry is up for reelection. Former Representative Terry Carpenter (D.) is his opponent.

Biggest Cotton Crop Since '37 Forecast

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A cotton crop of 15,219,000 bales—about 3½ million bales more than estimated domestic and export requirements—was forecast by the Government Crop Reporting Board yesterday.

The estimate predicts the largest cotton crop in 11 years, and the seventh largest in history. Yesterday's estimate was 50,000 bales (500 pounds to a bale) larger than the August 8 estimate. It compares with a crop of 11,851,000 bales produced last year, and a 12,014,000 average for the 10 years 1937-1946.

The huge crop promises major headaches for Government officials charged with operation of price supports as well as for cotton textile manufacturers and wholesalers.

The report was watched eagerly by cotton dealers and textile makers. Within recent weeks the demand for textiles has dropped off materially. Many mills have curtailed operations.

The slump is the biggest the textile market has known since before the war. Although prices for cotton goods have dropped, wholesalers and retailers are "buying from hand to mouth," waiting for still lower quotations.

The famous Worth Street (New York City) textile market has seen print cloth drop from 38 cents to 25 cents a yard. Yarn had a similar decline.

Manufacturers complain that higher costs, including labor, have made further cuts dangerous. Reports indicate inventories have been held to a minimum.

Exports of both raw cotton and textiles also have slumped sharply. In the first six months this year textile exports have dropped to 484 million yards from 707 million exported in the same period in 1947.

In the 11 months from August 1, 1947, to June 30 this year, raw cotton exports totaled 1,819,000 bales, off 53 per cent from the same period a year ago. This compares with 6,501,000 bales exported in 1939. In 1931 exports reached 9,193,000—the highest in the last 20 years.

The support price for cotton (middling 15/16) is now 30.74 cents a pound. Cotton is supported at 92½ per cent of parity—the highest for any commodity.

Market prices are now down virtually to the support level. October futures closed last night at 30.94 cents a pound—just 2/10 of a cent above the support price. December futures were about at the support level, closing at 30.76 cents a pound.

This is almost one fourth lower than the high in July, 1947, when cotton hit 39.59 cents a pound when predictions of last year's crop indicated it would be less than requirements.

At present the Government has loans on comparatively little cotton—on August 31 it owned or had on loan only 30,889 bales. But officials expect to see this materially increased this fall when the crop is fully harvested.

In August, 1939, the Government owned almost seven million bales of cotton—almost half as much as this year's bumper crop—which it had taken under the price-support program.

All this cotton has been disposed of—during the war for use of armed forces, etc., and since in rehabilitation of occupied areas—particularly Germany and Japan. Under the program to get cotton spindles spinning again in Japan and Germany, the cotton was advanced and later paid for with manufactured textiles which were in turn sold abroad. The Government suffered little if any loss on its holdings.

Although the demand for textiles at mills has dried up, indications are it is due to both wholesalers and retailers reducing their inventories. Retail sales showed a slump last spring as the result of a mild buyers' strike. But recently retail sales have equalled last year's sales in dollar value, although textile prices have been reduced.

Textile dealers are watching carefully if the unusually big summer slump in the Worth Street market will let up soon. The market ordinarily picks up after Labor Day. It is still too early to determine how much of a comeback it will register.

Cotton men also are watching to see what action Secretary of Agriculture Brannan will take as to next year's cotton acreage quota. Under the law he may limit the acreage when the supply of cotton exceeds normal by 7 per cent. It will pass that easily.

Record Cotton Crop Price Of $2.78 Billion Possible

The 1947 cotton crop (lint and seed) jingled $2,291,202,000 into the cotton farmers' pockets. If the crop predicted yesterday pans out and current farm prices hold, the return to cotton farmers will be around $2,785,138,000. This would break the previous record of $2,348,526,000 they got in 1919.

U. S. Bank Lends Finland $5 Million to Buy Cotton

The Government-owned Export-Import Bank aannounced last night another five-million-dollar loan to Finland to buy raw cotton in this country.

The bank explained the Finnish textile industry has been "almost wholly dependent" upon the United States for raw cotton imports.

The industry was described as "largely domestic, but small quantities of textiles are exported to Denmark and Norway."

Greeks Seize 890 Suspected Communists

Athens, Sept. 8 (U.P.)—Security forces arrested 890 suspected Communists today in the third wholesale roundup of the week. Twenty other persons wanted on criminal charges also were seized.

Meanwhile, the United Nations Balkan Commission voted 7 to 1 to forward to the U. N. reports of 10 incidents observed along the Greek-Albanian frontier, supporting Greek claims that Albania is aiding the guerillas. Australia opposed the action and Pakistan abstained.

Press dispatches today reported another border incident, the third of the week. Six Greek soldiers were wounded by mortar fire, allegedly from Albania.

The Ministry of Interior charged that guerillas have kidnaped 200 more children from the Piraeus Mountain district and taken them to Albania.

Albania Denies Giving Aid to Markos' Men

Paris, Sept. 8 (AP).—Albania denied today, in a note to the United Nations secretariat, that she is aiding the Markos forces in Greece.

The note said in part: "the Albanian government considers the Greek civil war as an interior affair of the Greek people which must be solved by the Greek people themselves."

Bank Reserve Requirements Increased to Check Inflation

"country" areas about 700 million dollars.

Officials said banks can absorb part of the increase by putting up money they now hold in excess of present reserve requirements.

They estimated Federal Reserve member banks as a whole have some 800 to 900 million dollars in excess reserves, with the "country" banks holding about 550 million of the total.

Exactly what effect the action will have is uncertain, an official told a reporter. He said it is impossible for the Reserve Board to foretell what the banks will do to meet the situation.

If they sell Government bonds to the Reserve System and put up the money to cover the additional reserves, their lending power will remain unchanged. Their earnings, however, will be decreased by the forced switch from interest-bearing bonds to reserve set asides that earn no interest.

Reserve officials are inclined to believe the new requirement is certain to make borrowing from banks somewhat more difficult.

This action follows up an earlier step by the Reserve Board to use part of the inflation-braking powers it was given by the recent extra session of Congress.

The board has announced it will put controls on consumer credit into effect September 20. Installment buyers in general will be required to pay 20 per cent down (33 per cent in case of automobiles) and make full payment in 15 to 18 months.

The Treasury, under Federal Reserve Board urging, has taken still another anti-inflation step, raising the interest rate on its one-year securities from 1⅛ to 1¼ per cent.

The Treasury action already has been followed by a hike in short-term interest rates of private lending agencies, a development which Government officials hope will serve to discourage borrowing to some extent.

vania experiments were carried out, it was reported, to find out what goes on within a diseased "hinge" of the body—a knee, ankle, shoulder or elbow. The knee-joint was chosen as easiest to study.

Further experiments, it was announced, will be made with even finer measuring units recently perfected. These, it was said, will make possible the study of temperatures within finger-joints, wrists and other small joints of the body.

Commenting on intial findings, they said:

"It appears significant that cold, pain, fear and even smoking produce an identical effect; that is, the apparent constriction of the skin vessels and dilation of the vessels within the joints. Perhaps this observation may lead to an explanation of how such factors aggravate or may even precipitate an arthritic process."

Highest joint temperature recorded in rheumatoid arthritis was 97.1 degrees, in an elbow, and 96 degrees in a knee joint. Normal inner temperature of the healthy knee is about 90 degrees, they said.

No recommendations were made, and doctors were left to use the results as they wished in their age-old arguments over benefits of their partciular brand of heat treatments for pained joints.

In formal opening service of the congress' twenty-sixth annual convention last night, Dr. O. Leonard Huddleston of Los Angeles, Calif., told members of the growing aspect of physical medicine, which he termed the youngest specialty in medicine.

He spoke following installation ceremonies at which he was seated as president of the congress.

Dr. Huddleston, of the Department of Physical Medicine, University of Southern California School of Medicine, called particular attention to work needed in the field of geriatrics (diseases of old age) and the opportunities for physiatrists in such work.

Praising medical advances for increasing man's life span, Dr. Howard A. Rusk, professor and chairman of the department of rehabilitation and physical medicine of New York University College of Medicine, told the congress that medical men must now concentrate on helping the aging handicapped "to the fullest physical, mental, social, vocational and economic usefulness of which they are capable."

Physicians and physical therapists attending the congress were asked to police their own fields of quacks and charlatans by Dr. Irvin Kerlan, medical officer of the Food and Drug Administration, Federal Security Agency. He asked especial assistance in enforcement of the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

Dr. Bert A. Treister, chief of Physical Medicine Rehabilitation Service in the United States Veterans Hospital, Brecksville, Ohio, described special measures needed to circumvent shoulder slant and other bad posture aftermaths of thoracoplasty (operations in which ribs are removed). Special exercises to prevent body canting were outlined.

Still another speaker, Jack E. Lovelock, former Olympic track star, told of body-building measures to promote health, efficiency and enjoyment of life. Lovelock is now assistant director of physical medicine and director of rehabilitation at the Hospital for Special Surgery, New York City.

Progress in the development of microwave diathermy machines for uniform, penetrating heat treatments of arthritis, bursitis and similar ailments were reported by research workers from the Mayo Foundation in Rochester, Minn.; the University of Minnesota School of Medicine at Minneapolis, and the Medical School of Northwestern University at Chicago.

Are all worsteds alike? Of course not. The various grades of worsteds may be distinguished by the quality and length of the fibres used and the skill of the weaver. Russians Reject French Protest on Kidnap a necessity to protect the direct interests of the occupation authorities."

Dratvin's reply closed by accusing a French liaison officer at City Hall of "mishandling" a Soviet sector policeman.

Rejection of the protest coincided with an apparent Big Four deadlock over Soviet demands for veto power on currency control that stalled negotiations for settlement of the east-west conflict over blockaded Berlin.

Soviet sector police headquarters said in a statement last night that 60 persons have been arrested in and near City Hall since Monday. The building is in the Soviet sector of Berlin.

More than 40 of these were western sector policemen called to City Hall by the municipal government to help protect the building from the rioters. Two of the 60 have been released, the statement added.

American officers at the four-power Berlin air safety center said they had received another notice from the Russians that Soviet planes of various types would be flying in maneuvers over the Allied air corridor for several days this week.

The notice was of a routine nature, and they did not attach any particular significance to it, the officers said.

Howley protested against the arrest and barring from the City Hall of two American officers last night. Today there was no blockade of the City Hall and exit and entry was on a normal basis.

May Go to Higher Level

Howley told newsmen that the reply from Kotikov "was satisfactory for the time being."

Howley reported to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American military governor, after his talk with the Soviet commandant. It was understood that protests may be made on a higher level directed at Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, the Soviet military governor.

In London diplomatic informants said a progress report received by the British Foreign Office on the Berlin talks recorded little headway in efforts to resolve the crisis.

A Foreign Office spokesman said there would be a pause in the Berlin negotiations while the four home governments studied the report.

London diplomatic informants said that in the Moscow phase of the East-West talks agreement was reached in principle to set up a permanent four-power financial commission to supervise the Soviet Eastmark in Berlin. The Berlin talks bogged down when Russia insisted upon the power of veto in the commission. The Western powers want majority rule, the informants said.

MacArthur Hits Reds on Jap Prisoners

Tokyo, Sept. 8 (AP).—General MacArthur struck hard at his Soviet critics today, accusing Russia of increasing its military potential by working Japanese war prisoners under "conditions approaching slave labor."

A "sharply worded" letter "on behalf of MacArthur" was sent off last Friday to Lieut. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, head of the Russian mission in Japan.

The exact contents of the letter were not divulged. It must have stung, because Derevyanko came out Monday with a statement heaping more criticism on the ban against strikes by Japanese government workers.

The spokesman declared the Russians have "callously refused" to give MacArthur any information on the prisoners.

Parley on Former Italian Colonies Useless, U. S. Tells Russia and the French were reported ready to follow suit.

But it was clear from the American note that any such meeting could do little more than register failure—unless, of course, the Russians proposed some way of settling the problem quickly.

"In the absence of such new proposals," said the American note, "this Government suggests that the four governments concerned should agree among themselves that, having failed to reach agreement on the disposition of these territories by the date stipulated under the terms of the treaty of peace with Italy, this fact should be notified to the Secretary-General of the United Nations either by the four powers individually, through diplomatic channels, or through the secretary-general of the Council of Foreign Ministers.

"This Government considers that the procedure suggested above would meet the requirements of the Italian treaty of peace."

For more than a year the deputies of the four Foreign Ministers have wrestled with the future disposition of Libya, Eritrea and Somaliland, all of them conquered from the Italians in the war. A four-power commission of investigation went to the three colonies, but found the inhabitants themselves divided in almost every area.

The commission came closest to reporting agreement over Italian Somaliland, a huge strip of barren and relatively unproductive desert along the hottest part of the Indian Ocean coast. It reported that most of the inhabitants wanted a trusteeship, preferably American or British, or even Italian, but found them strongly opposed to letting Ethiopia control the territory.

As to Eritrea, along the Red Sea coast, the investigators found the inhabitants of the highland areas wanted union with Ethiopia, while those on the coast wanted a four-power trusteeship leading to ultimate independence.

Libya, on the southern coast of the Mediterranean, was the most difficult problem of all. The people of Cyrenaica, the eastern part of the former colony, wanted independence for the whole teritory, but with their own Moslem chieftain as its leader; the people of Tripoli, the western part, wanted independence but under their own leadership.

Confronted with these conflicting wishes of the inhabitants, the Foreign Ministers' deputies promptly disagreed on political grounds. The Americans and British felt the local inhabitants' wishes should be respected to some extent, but both showed themselves concerned over the strategic importance of Libya, where the Italians and Germans were able to throttle Allied Mediterranean shipping in the early part of the war.

The Russians, in general, favored Italian trusteeship for all three colonies. France, concerned about the security of her neighboring territory of Tunisia, wanted a trusteeship over the Fezzan, the vast desert area of southern Libya.

Smaller countries involved in the war against Italy were equally divided, with Ethiopia insisting on the two former Italian colonies along her borders, and Egypt wanting eastern Libya put under an Arab trusteeship.

The mix-up was further complicated by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's recent statement that Italy should have a chance to develop her former colonies under a United Nations trusteeship. Secretary Marshall told his press conference yesterday that American policy on the Italian colonies had been decided, although he declined firmly to say what it was.

He did say, however, that it was a bi-partisan policy, implying that it had Dewey's approval. John Foster Dulles, Dewey's chief adviser on foreign affairs, is to be one of the American delegates at the coming assembly meeting in Paris.

Militia Keeps Order At Benes' Funeral

Prague, Sept. 8 (NYHT).—More than 5000 rifle-bearing members of the Czech Communist factory militia were concentrated in the center of Prague today to keep order during the funeral procession of the late Dr. Eduard Benes.

Unusual precautions taken to protect Czech government leaders in the procession included an armed guard of more than 300 men marching four abreast, which almost hid Premier Antonin Zapotocky and the cabinet ministers from the view of hundreds of thousands of persons lining the street.

The coffin of the former President, borne on an artillery carriage attached to an American 2½-ton Army truck, moved slowly down Wenceslaus Square from the National Museum at about 5 p. m. The sound of mass weeping came from the crowd as the coffin passed.

The center of the city had the atmosphere of an armed camp. Observers believed it was the largest concentration of militia in the city since the Communists took power in February.

Backs to the Crowd

The factory militia stood shoulder to shoulder along the curb on both sides of Wenceslaus Square and National Avenue from noon until after the procession. They turned their backs to the crowd.

The procession started down Wenceslaus Square after Premier Zapotocky made a short address at the Pantheon of the National Museum. He warned "reactionary elements" not to "misuse" the memory of Dr. Benes to stir up animosity against the government.

group of Independent Republicans, gave him the same argument.

Outside of all this discussion and effort was the French Communist Party, trying to get back into the government in one way or another. This evening it repeated its attempt—and sought to overcome one objection by approving the principle of American aid to France under the Marshall Plan.

To support the Communist bid for a place in the government, several demonstrations of workers were organized in Paris but police with little difficulty kept them away from President Auriol's palace.

Meanwhile, the price of gold continued to rise in relation to the franc, indicating a lack of confidence in the currency.

Stern Group Camp Raided By Israeli

Tel Aviv, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Israeli troops raided a Stern group camp today in what reliable sources termed a first step in pressuring Jewish extremists into joining the Israeli army or face being outlawed.

In a surprise move against the Sternist camp across the Yarkon River from Tel Aviv, the army seized 15 persons for "questioning." Informants said the campaign would continue against Sternists as well as the Irgun Zvai Leumi, both of which have separate fighting forces.

(Dr. Israel Goldstein, New York, newly elected treasurer of the Jewish Agency Executive in Jerusalem, today announced a 192-million-dollar agency budget for 1948-49, a pooled dispatch from American correspondents in Jerusalem reported.

(Goldstein said approximately 75 per cent of the budget was being raised in the United States. He said half of it would be allocated for colonization and there would be a minimum program of 10,000 immigrants into Israel monthly. None of the money will be allocated to the Israel government for military or political purposes, he said.)

(At Amman, Trans-Jordan, United Nations Mediator Count Folke Bernadotte announced today that the Arabs had agreed to withdraw from their positions in the Mount Zion and Deir Abu Tor sectors in southern Jerusalem.)

Israel Recognition Delayed

Secretary Marshall indicated yesterday that the United States probably would not give full de jure recognition to the new government of Israel until after the coming election in Palestine.

He told his press conference that he thought the election would be held about October 1, but a government of Israel spokesman in Washington later explained that it would not take place until November 15.

The question of full recognition was being considered very carefully, the secretary said. The problem now is one of timing, he explained, and he said it was his hope that recognition could come after the Israeli election. He said the final decision rested with President Truman.

The recognition announced by President Truman last spring was only partial or "de facto," since the government of Israel had just been formed. "De jure" recognition would mean that the United States considered the government of Israel permanently established.

Red Dictatorship Charged In Fur Garment Industry

By The Associated Press

Joseph J. Bernstein, a New York lawyer, told a congressional committee yesterday that Communist union leaders have set up a dictatorship over the fur garment industry.

He said small processors are being driven out of business.

Bernstein said he represents three associations of fur liners and finishers. He was the first witness before a House Labor Subcommittee checking into alleged Communist infiltration into the CIO Fur and Leather Workers Union.

The lawyer testified that the union leaders have refused to allow manufacturers to contract with small shops for lining and finishing fur garments.

Union detectives enforce the ban and manufacturers dealing with small contractors are assessed fines running as high as $5000, Bernstein said. He added:

"Our members are practically starving. The union tells us 'you've got to get out of business. We don't care what happens to you.'"

Bernstein said the union's top leaders are Ben Gold, president, and Irving Potash, manager of the Furriers' Joint Council. The council, he said, is a "left wing group."

Gold is a member of the Communist Party national executive committee. Potash is one of 12 Communist officials recently indicted by a Federal grand jury in New York.

Bernstein said the union leaders claim small contractors are sweat shops, and will not allow manufacturers to do business with them. He said the small contractors pay union wages and hire union members.

Wider use of contractors, he added, would reduce the prices of fur garments.

New Walkouts Boost Total Of Strike-Idle Over 115,000

By The Associated Press

New strikes hit the Nation's flour and automobile production Wednesday.

They boosted to more than 115,000 the number of strike-idle in five major industries. Meanwhile, a CIO union set September 17 as a strike date for 25,000 telephone workers.

Grain handlers at 14 Minneapolis and St. Paul flour mills, who voted in favor of a strike Monday in support of wage increase demands, began their walkout in mid-afternoon. General Mills reported its three mills employing 575 men had closed.

Meet With Conciliators

As pickets began setting up their lines, representatives of the mills and the AFL American Federation of Grain Processors held a closed meeting with Federal conciliators.

The strike vote came after the union refused to accept a 12½ cents hourly wage increase recommended by a Governor's fact-finding board. The union said it wanted "at least" 20 cents. The union originally asked for 57 cents for its 1800 members involved.

In Detroit, a strike of 170 plant guards at the Briggs Manufacturing Co. made 50,000 automobile production workers idle. Some 25,000 Briggs workers refused to cross picket lines. Packard Motor Car Co. and Chrysler Corp. were forced to lay off 25,000 employes because of a car body shortage. Assembly lines in both auto companies were stalled.

The work stoppage stemmed from demands of the independent United Plant Guard Workers of America Union for increased preparatory time before starting work.

64,000 Oil Workers Idle

Another 64,000 workers remained idle in the West Coast oil refining industry strike, the New York-northern New Jersey trucking strike, and the week-long work stoppage of West Coast CIO longshoremen.

In the trucking strike, employers filed unfair labor practice charges against the AFL teamsters' local union. The employers accused the union of "interfering, coercion and restraining" other employes in the industry in violation of the Taft-Hartley Law. The charges were filed with the National Labor Relations Board.

Other labor developments included:

Ottumwa, Iowa—All fresh pork operations at the Morrell packing plant were closed down because of a new dispute over work assignments. The CIO-United Packinghouse Workers Union said it would conduct a strike vote this week among its 3000 members.

Cleveland—The Brotherhoods of Railroad Trainmen and Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen postponed a threatened strike that would have disrupted operations of the New Orleans Public Belt Railroad. President Truman earlier appointed an emergency board to study the dispute. The unions charged the "unjustified discharge" of a union fireman.

Freight Embargo Imposed

Washington—Because of the transportation tie-up caused by the West Coast maritime strike the Association of American Railroads imposed an embargo on freight moving to Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports for shipment by water to the West Coast.

The embargo does not affect rail freight going to Eastern ports for local use, or for transfer to ships bound for foreign ports.

The purpose is "to avoid tying up freight cars" which cannot be unloaded after they reach port.

Washington.—Interior Secretary J. A. Krug asked five Western Governors to help save gasoline and oil during the strike of California refinery workers.

In telegrams to the Governors Krug said a fuel oil "crisis" far worse than last winter's is in prospect, on the West Coast unless refinery operations are resumed quickly.

The telegrams went to Govs. Earl Warren of California, Vail Pittman of Nevada, John H. Hall of Oregon and Mon C. Wallgren of Washington and Acting Gov. Dan Garvey of Arizonia.

"Out of gas" signs already dotted Southern California service stations.

Carey Denounced By UE Delegates

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—The CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers today reelected three top officials who had opposed signing Taft-Hartley Act non-Communist affidavits. Delegates to the convention also told union officials to lay plans immediately to enforce a 30-hour week with no cuts in take-home pay and a guaranteed annual wage.

The officers chosen were:

Albert J. Fitzgerald of Lynn, Mass., reelected president; Julius Emspak of Schnectady, N. Y., secretary-treasurer, and James J. Matles of New York City, director of organization.

Fitzgerald defeated Harry Block of Philadelphia for the union's highest office by 3652 votes to 719.

Block had been backed by James B. Carey, a past president of the union, who now is secretary-treasurer of the CIO.

Emspak defeated Anthony Cimino of Springfield, Mass., and Matles defeated John M. Duffy of Pittsburgh.

Prior to the election, the 1000 delegates had adopted a resolution denouncing Carey for "defaming" the UE before a House Labor Subcommittee investigating communism.

Fitzgerald, addressing the UE convention, quoted the subcommittee as having said in a statement "Fitzgerald has the reputation of not seeming to be an anti-Communist."

"For the benefit of that committee," Fitzgerald told the delegates, "Let it be shown on the record that I am no kind of a Communist, anti or otherwise.

Carey, appearing last week before the subcommittee, had said "the Communist Party exercises undue influence on the policies of the UE."

The convention resolution condemning Carey was approved by an estimated 8-to-1 hand vote.

It charged the subcommittee consisted of "two Congressmen who are personal political enemies of this union as well as reactionary enemies of all working people."

The subcommittee members were Representatives Charles J. Kersten (R., Wis.) and Carroll Kearns (R., Pa.).

"To further his own private ambition," the resolution charged, Carey "joined them in defaming the UE, added to their slanders of his union."

Another convention resolution condemned the last Congress as having failed to pass unemployment legislation "to relieve the coming depression."

It termed this an "immediate problem" which Congress had failed to avert.

The convention also voted to eliminate from its contracts "all provisions that call for employer-employe cooperation relative to increased efficiency" as a move against alleged speedup practices.

Mitchum's Day in Court Is Formality

Los Angeles, Sept. 8 (AP).—Film Actor Robert Mitchum and three companions, who were arrested in a narcotics squad raid last Wednesday, made a brief court appearance today.

The four, indicted yesterday on charges of possessing marijuana, appeared in Superior Court for a habeas corpus hearing. However, it was a mere formality, as their demand to have charges presented had already been met by the county grand jury indictment.

The defendants, Mitchum, starlet Lila Leeds, dancer Vicki Evans and real estate man Robin Ford, are at liberty on bond of $1000 each.

At the hearing today Superior Judge Thomas L. Ambrose dissolved the writs. The four are to be arraigned on the indictments September 15.

Mitchum and the others were arrested in a cottage occupied by Miss Leeds.

Bar Group Hits Court 'Freeze'

Seattle, Sept. 8 (AP).—The policy body of the American Bar Association rejected today two proposed constitutional amendments to to "freeze" the Supreme Court's size and safeguard its powers.

The lively controversy in the policy-setting house of delegates revived the arguments of the "court-packing" battle under the Roosevelt Administration a decade ago. It was the highlight of the day at the Bar Association convention.

The house of delegates action overruled the recommendations of the two committees which drafted the proposals. The voice vote was close.

One of the proposed amendments would have fixed the court inflexibly at nine members, with compulsory retirement at age 75. It was designed to prevent any future attempt by the President to influence high court action by addition of new justices.

The second provided that in all cases arising under the United States Constitution the court should have jurisdiction over appeals, "both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as it shall make." It was aimed at any future congressional action to curb the court's authority.

'Century Association' Veterans to Reunite

Baltimore, Sept. 8 (AP).—Veterans of the 100th Infantry Division, a Seventh Army outfit that broke through the turned-around Maginot Line after a six-month siege early in 1945, will try to get their "Century Association" going again at a national reunion opening here Friday.

The Century boys got together last year at Raleigh, N. C.

Chat Patterson of Washington, national chairman of the American Veterans Committee, will speak at a Friday evening banquet. Harold Stagg, editor of the Veterans' Times in Washington, will be the honor guest at a Saturday luncheon.

Quinn Silent On Licenses For Exports

John A. Quinn of Jersey City declined yesterday to discuss with a Senate subcommittee 15 export licenses which he was alleged to have sold a New York exporter and which the subcommittee said were forged.

Levey

Quinn, who is under bail on a New York charge of passing a worthless $4000 check, was subpenaed to return before the committee Friday with his lawyer. He told the committee he had been advised by his lawyer not to answer any questions at all and could not decide, in the lawyer's absence, which questions might or might not be "incriminating."

Previously Harry H. Levey, a New York exporter, repeated testimony previously given a Senate Small Business Subcommittee that he had paid Quinn $29,000 over a three-month period for 15 licenses to export lard and flour. William Rogers, committee counsel, showed that nine of the Quinn licenses bore numbers which duplicated those on licenses actually issued by the Office of International Trade to other firms for other commodities. The six remaining licenses, Rogers showed, bore numbers which never had been issued by the OIT.

All 15, he said, were "obviously" forgeries.

The subcommittee, under chairmanship of Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) will meet at 11:30 a. m. today to hear other witnesses.

Crowd Going To Meeting On Curriculum

Revised teaching methods for Montgomery County schools were adopted formally last night by the board of education at a special meeting in Rockville.

Four of the six board members were present and unanimously approved without change, the recommendations of a board of education-sponsored workshop which last month studied the curriculum.

At the same time, the board made its first formal reply to a Bethesda parents' group that has agitated for more emphasis on the "three Rs" and less on "frills."

In its reply, the board said charges by the parents were unfounded and that there is no basis for the parents' interpretation of the educational program in the county.

Replying to charges by the parents that children are treated as "behavioristic, psychiatric guinea pigs," the board affirmed its determination that nothing be done to undermine American family life or to treat children other than as normal persons.

Commenting on the general statement, President H. Stanley Stine described the reply as "a definite" answer to the parents' group.

In connection with the new course of study which was adopted, officials explained that no major changes in curriculum subject matter is included but that several major changes will be made to simplify the work of teachers and increase their efficiency.

Sums Up Objectives

In outlining the program, Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county school superintendent, summed up its objectives as follows:

1. To make the course of study easier to use by outlining it briefly to the teachers.
2. To identify by grade and subjects the material to be taught.
3. To provide a course of study for each subject.
4. To organize materials of instruction separately in one bulletin for each grade.
5. To continue the policy established in 1945-46 of supplying classes with common textbooks for class use and extending this policy to individual subjects.

Overflow Expected At Curriculum Meeting

Members of a parent group protesting teaching practices in Montgomery County Schools last night predicted an overflow crowd for the mass meeting they are sponsoring at 8:30 tonight in the Kensington Armory.

Spokesmen for the Parents' League for Curriculum Improvements said 500 seats had been arranged in the Armory and they predicted there would be standing room only at the protest meeting.

John H. Hiser, Bethesda theater owner, said group members would report on their investigation into what they believe to be "frills" in the county schooy system.

Organized several months ago, the group has campaigned vigorously for more emphasis on basic studies and less on social studies, arts and music.

Assistant Schools Supt. E. M. Douglass said he planned to attend the meeting as an observer, but would make a statement if called upon.

Plans were also being completed yesterday for a school forum to be held Friday at 8 p. m. in Leland Junior High School, Bethesda.

Principal speakers will be Assistant Suptendent Douglass and county supervisor I. G. McNayr and Dr. Thomas Pullen, jr., State superintendent of schools.

Area School Enrollments Setting Record

had 910 white elementary students on part-time. Dr. Hansen estimated that next week there will be 1600.

A. Kiger Savoy, associate superintendent in charge of Negro elementary schools, said that there will be about 1300 Negro students on half-day schedules in 11 schools, about the same number as last year.

Registration of District and Montgomery County public school pupils will be completed today, with classes starting Monday. Arlington County public school students will start back next Tuesday. Fairfax County public schools open Wednesday.

Parochial Schools to Open

Parochial schools in Washington and Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties will open today.

Increased enrollment in Prince Georges may mean resorting to double shifts, Shugart said. A decision on such a step will not be made for "at least a week."

He noted that peak enrollments were in schools in areas adjoining the District, in Mount Rainier, Hyattsville and Bladensburg.

Part of the increase, he said, was due to the return of Maryland students who have been attending schools in the District.

Congress this year abolished free tuition in District schools for nonresident students, forcing them to pay if they remained.

Pupils arriving at two Prince Georges County schools yesterday were told to report back Monday when school facilities will be more nearly ready for occupancy. At Landover Hills Elementary School, some work remains to be done on classrooms, Shugart said, while at the Lakeland High School near Berwyn, sewer connections are lacking.

Other new schools were ready for the fall term. They were an eight-classroom, cafeteria and auditorium addition to the Douglas High School, Upper Marlboro; and a two-room addition to the Oxon Hill Elementary and Junior High School.

Mothers Seek Kindergarten

A group of mothers from the Prince Georges area of Takoma Park will meet at 10:30 a. m. today at the J. Eons Ray School to start a campaigh fo ra kindergarten for which the county school system has no provision.

Robert N. Mattingly, principal at Cardozo, said that classes will begin at the high school in three section starting at 8:30 a. m.; 9:10 a. m. and 10 a. m. and run until 2, 2:50 and 3:40 p. m.

The staggered hours and three lunch periods will enable the school to accommodate the students, he said. Class periods will be lengthened from the 35 minutes of last year to 45 minutes, he said. Each student will be given a full program.

The six white elementary schools that will be on double shifts in Washington, according to Dr. Hansen, are:

Kimball, Congress Heights, Patterson, Stanton, Kenilworth and Beers.

Negro elementary schools that will be on part-time are:

Bruce, Morse, Langston, Cook, Crummell, Douglass - Simmons, Walker, Jones, Birney, Garfield and Payne.

Meanwhile, with opening of District schools less than a week away, Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of the District Bureau of School Medical Inspection, asked parents to see to it that children are "in the best possible physical condition" to enter or return to school.

Vaccination against smallpox is a prerequisite to school entrance, while children under 10 should be immunized against diphtheria and whooping cough, if this has not been done during the past two years. Dr. Murphy also urged parents to check physical and dental defects if such tests have not already been made.

School Section Sunday

A separate school section will be included in The Washington Post this Sunday. It will describe the current situation in our schools, including the problems facing our educators and what parents and children can expect from the schools this season. Separate articles will discuss the schools of the District of Columbia and of neighboring Maryland and Virginia communities.

$32,000 Reported Lost In Parked Auto Fire

Hopkinsville, Ky., Sept. 8 (AP).—C. A. Barnett, liquor store operator, reported today that $32,000 to $34,000 in currency was destroyed during the night when his automobile burned while parked near his home. The money was in the glove compartment, he said.

Police Lieut. James Durham and Finance Commissioner Clyde Vinson advised Barnett to bring the charred currency to a bank here and make application to the United States Treasury for redemption.

Safecrackers Get $7500 At White Russian Farm

Lakewood, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP).—Safecrackers stole $7500 and missed another $8500 at Rova Farms, White Russians retreat, State police reported today. There were 2000 guests on the estate at the time, police said.

The farm was in the news a month ago when Soviet Consul General Jacob Lomakin asserted a missing Soviet schoolteacher, Mikhail Samarin, and his family were detained there. Later it was disclosed they had been hiding on a Freehold farm.

N. Y. Employes Like Dewey's Pay Policies

to sit down with them and discuss their point of view as well as the point of view of the 14,200,000 citizens for whom we all work before coming in with a recommendation. I do believe that we have devised means by which employes have a real share in the decisions."

The association president, Dr. Frank L. Tolman, a retired State employe, had this recent comment on the Dewey plan:

"We owe much to the present administration, but to my mind the greatest is the advance in dealing openly with our employe association. The association has often been called into conference before—too frequently—AFTER major decisions had been made.

"This year we were accorded conferences to reach decisions—a very different matter. We were given facts and figures prior to the conferences and we had full opportunities both to present our proposals and points of view, and fairly and fully to examine counter proposals and viewpoints."

Nothing approaching the conference method is used by the Federal Government to negotiate with all of its employes. If Dewey is elected President, he can be expected to inaugurate his plan here.

Dewey's handling of the salary problem also is applauded by the association, which had this to say about him:

"Governor Dewey has shown a sensitive appreciation of the pressing problems created by the drastic rise in the cost of living and he has taken prompt action to alleviate present distress as well as to correct salary inequities of long standing. He has been alert to the necessity for better administration and working conditions in the public service.

"When Dewey took office on January 1, 1943, the average salary in the State service was in the neiborhood of $1700. Today the minimum salary is $1840 for all positions . . . It is apparent that salary rates in the State service have advanced more in the past five years than during the entire preceding 50 year period."

It's pertinent to point out here that the average New York State employe this year was given an increase of $560 through a commonsense percentage increase. Also, that Dewey took the lead in fighting for salary boosts.

This compares to a flat $330 for classified employes and $450 for postal workers which squeaked through Congress at the last possible moment only because of several persistent Congressmen, and with little leadership in the executive department.

However, the association hasn't relaxed. It's pounding away at Dewey and his Civil Service Commission to strengthen the career Civil Service by bringing more State jobs under the competitive service; it's demanding a further adjustment of some salaries; it's sponsoring a bill to create a public employe labor relation board, and it's opposed to the appointment of politicians and political favorites to State jobs.

And that brings up the Dewey patronage system, about which there is much talk in this city. A Dewey spokesman explains the operation of the system thus:

"We laid down these conditions on patronage when we first came to Albany in 1943: (1) that no one would be appointed unless he had the indorsement of his county Republican organization; (2) that we wouldn't appoint political hacks and dopes to State jobs, and finally, that every person recommended for a job that paid more than $2500 would have to be investigated as to character and his ability to hold the job."

The Dewey intimate said there were many squawks at first from those who wanted to foist off their own undesirables on the State payroll. He recalled how a county chairman had recommended a veterinarian to be a coroner, and how another sought to put in a slot machine operator as an assistant attorney general.

"There is no fussing now," the spokesman said. "The county leaders soon discovered that we meant what we said when we demanded competent people, and they have also learned that it has helped them locally as well as the Governor and the State Republican organization to get the best possible Republicans for State jobs."

Something similar to this system would be operated here if Dewey is elected President. The spokesman emphasized that Dewey is an "organization man" and that patronage is the backbone of a political organization.

The Dewey aide who is in charge of patronage is R. Burdell Bixby, the Governor's assistant secretary, who reports to Paul Lockwood, the secretary.

Incidentally, Warren Moscow refers to the patronage system in his new book, "Politics in the Empire State." The New York Times political reporter has this to say:

"He (Dewey) assumed complete control of his party. County leaders who opposed him were broken by cold, hard bitten use of the patronage powers of the Governor's office. Legislators suffered a similar fate. He brooked no interference."

Tomorrow Jerry Klutz will report on Governor Dewey's philosophy of government, its administration and personnel.

Wallace Leader In State Faces Riot Indictment

Baltimore, Sept. 8 (AP).—Harold Buchman, Baltimore attorney who is director of the Progressive Party of Maryland and its campaign for Henry Wallace, today posted $4400 bond on a charge of conspiracy to incite a riot in connection with an interracial tennis match.

Buchman was indicted by the grand jury a week ago but his involvement was not disclosed until he posted bond.

The tennis matches caused a furore at the municipal courts in Druid Hill Park on a Sunday in July. Park police ordered the matches stopped, and most of the participants sat down on the courts. They were carried to patrol wagons. Demonstrators were arrested for disorderly conduct at the police station.

Buchman was not at the tennis outing and was not among those named in the original indictments charging violation of the park rules. Many of those arrested said they had joined in the tennis matches purposely to test park segregaton rules.

Slip of Hand and Foot Lands Cabbie in Jail

Chicago, (U.P.).—A slip of the foot by a Chicago taxi driver brought police to investigate an accident. A slip of the hand brought Albert Diamond, the driver, to the city jail.

Diamond's cab struck th rear of another car when his foot slipped off the brake. Police asked for his chauffeur's license.

Diamond reached into his inside coat pocket and handed out the wrong piece of paper. In fact, 10 parking tickets fluttered to the street.

Fire Toll Reaches Eight

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP).—Four more workmen died today, raising to eight the number killed in yesterday's explosion and fire of the P. J. Brach & Sons candy factory. Thirteen persons remained in hospitals with burns and injuries.

Virginia Duality

There is a frantic scurrying of school authorities in various parts of Virginia to bring Negro educational facilities up to the level prevailing in white schools. Three counties—King George, Gloucester and Surry—are under court orders to equalize their separate schools and a fourth, Chesterfield County, has been directed to wipe out the differentials in salary between white and Negro teachers. The precedent which these court orders establish has caused other localities to scrutinize their own systems. For example, Arlington County, where a similar suit is pending, is refurbishing its Hoffman-Boston High School for Negroes in an effort to obtain accreditation. Officials there admit, however, that Negro facilities will remain below white standards because of a lack of classroom space.

There is much reason to feel encouraged by the attempts to wipe out the grosser instances of discrimination in education that prevail widely in Virginia and other parts of the South. Certainly Negro students should benefit from more libraries and gymnasiums and generally expanded physical plants. Even more important is the equalization of teachers' salaries as between the races. It is along these lines, perhaps, that progress first must be made, and the ground prepared for any consideration of the abolition of educational duality as recommended by the Wilson committee set up by the President.

This duality of educational instruction is bound to come to the fore as the result of the extra cost involved in equality of instruction. The problem is already felt in Virginia of the cost of maintaining duplicate facilities in a State which can ill afford it. In Arlington the custom has been for the county to pay tuition of Negro students attending Washington high schools. As a result the Hoffman-Boston School last year had only 23 students and one graduate. This year the county will pay tuition only for seniors, and the Hoffman-Boston enrollment may be expected to increase. But the county will be put to great expense to maintain the duality of instruction. The burden is considerably heavier in counties such as Surry, which is contending with a declining population.

It may be that the very financial load of duality ultimately will be the point that convinces Virginians of its futility where other arguments fail. We say ultimately because such a change can be achieved only by a change in the prevailing mores, yet Virginians cannot remain forever insensitive to the fact that in the present duplicate schools they are paying heavily for the duplication.

The Double Cross

It now appears that the 19 German policemen kidnaped and consigned to an unknown fate in the course of the Communist siege of the City Hall in Berlin were the victims of an astonishing piece of Russian perfidy. The police were from the western zone and had been sent to the City Hall to protect the Berlin City Council from the Communist strong-arm squads. Unhappily, as the result of the curious illusions still prevailing at the time of the Potsdam conference, the City Hall, like other important municipal centers, is in the Russian zone of Berlin.

Thus the policemen soon found themselves beleaguered by the Communist-directed mob and apparently sought refuge within the City Hall. According to an Associated Press report, negotiations for their release were undertaken by French officials with the Russian authorities. The French say that the Russian commandant, Major General Kotikov, gave promise of safe conduct for the return of the policemen to the French zone of the city. As they were leaving the building, however, they were seized by police of the Soviet sector, and forced into a truck, which drove away with them.

This is perhaps the most serious incident which has yet developed in the cold war between the Russians and the Western powers over Berlin. What it means is that the principles of combat which have hitherto prevailed even in the case of overt war no longer apply. In other words, the cold war is being waged in a moral atmosphere in which duplicity and deceit must be assumed in every situation. This seems to signify that agreement is now impossible with the Russians, who again and again have demonstrated that they intend to keep no agreement any longer than is expedient. It does not, however, necessarily convict General Kotikov of deliberate deception. It may merely indicate that the party leaders have been empowered to repudiate without warning any agreement which may be made by the Russian military. And now we have Secretary Marshall's admission that the whole purpose of the attacks on the Berlin municipal government is to make a joke of the four-power conference now in progress in that city.

Italy's Colonies

It may surprise Governor Dewey that he and the Russians think alike about the disposition of the thorny problem of the Italian colonies in North Africa, namely, that they should be returned to Italy. The Russians want to ventilate the issue before a meeting of the Foreign Ministers to be hurriedly brought together before the September 15 deadline, but Secretary Marshall has made plain the futility of such a conference. At present the problem is in the hands of deputies in London, and if agreement is not attained before then, the issue, under the terms of the Italian peace treaty, will go before the U. N. General Assembly, which will convene in Paris on September 21. The Soviet Union, before the Italian elections, sought to make capital out of its suggestion that Italy should have her colonies back, and doubtless wants another sounding board for pursuance of the same line of propaganda. To her credit, Italy, which hasn't the money or the inclination again to take up the dream-world of Mussolini, was more interested in the gambit on Trieste that the Western powers played by way of riposte.

We should judge, though the opinion of no power other than the Soviet Union has been given out, that there is general disposition to let Italy participate in some trusteeship arrangement in one or other of her old colonies, say, over Somaliland. And the people there are friendly to Italy. But the greatest help to Italian security would be an arrangement for the control of other areas which would make a sure shield out of the Mediterranean. The main area in this respect is Cyrenaica and to a lesser extent Tripolitania, both part of Libya, where Anglo-American air power is based. The Senussi in the former region have a pact with the British that the region will not go back to the Italians, and seem content enough with the British military administration. Ethiopia has rights that must be considered in Eritrea, where there is a Christian population, moreover, to fortify the Ethiopian claim.

What the Soviet Union would like to see is an upset of the strategic scheme in the Mediterranean narrows which is being fashioned under American leadership. It would be the height of folly to endanger this position. Those who are talking about the mistakes of Yalta might commit this country to a greater mistake than Yalta unless the whole problem is approached in security terms. Second to this consideration are the wishes of the backward inhabitants. Complications which are appreciated in Moscow are lost to sight in Albany, even though both come out for the same solution and for identical purposes of propaganda, namely, to court the Italians. The sensible people in Italy are doubtless amazed at this competition to saddle them with the groaning burden of great powership at the time when they are struggling with immediate problems of internal reconstruction and recovery. As Count Sforza said the other day, the tie they want is with a trading Europe, so that they may use and develop their own resources.

Mr. Byrnes' Apologia

Mr. Byrnes, whose loss to our public life is considerable, made an effort in Seattle to restore some balance in national thinking on American relations with Soviet Russia. He returns to a plea which he made six months ago not to mistake compromise for appeasement. Compromise is a basic word in the quest for peace-with-justice. Compromise is, indeed, the lubricant in all relations between states with different national interests. Without it there will be no escape from war. In relations with Soviet Russia a modus vivendi must be based upon compromise. No good is served by those who, believing in either the inevitability of war or the need for a preventive war, feel that any adjustment with the Russians would be a surrender. Such a view is coming to be more and more entertained. The common sense of Mr. Byrnes in more or less expressing an opposing point of view comes like a breath of fresh air in the current contentions.

At the same time Mr. Byrnes protests too much in defending the foreign policy of Mr. Roosevelt. To be sure, the current criticism of Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy is undermining the precious asset of Mr. Roosevelt's reputation in American relations with the world. People in other lands, looking at the spectacle of anti-Rooseveltism in America, may feel that America is going reactionary and illiberal. However, the plain fact is that America is going realistic. And, if Mr. Roosevelt's prestige is damaged in the process, that cannot be helped. Much better is it to seek and profit from the lessons of experience and history. Mr. Byrnes raps those whose criticisms are based on hindsight. But hindsight is better than no sight at all, and, in fact, is all that the majority of Americans can apply to many events in the war, not only Yalta, the details of which, after much hesitation and more disingenuousness, were given out to the public in small intermittent doses.

Every American has the right to criticize, in the light of hindsight, the wrong estimates of the military commanders on which the policy makers based their policy. In the old days governments strung up military commanders who made mistakes. In these tenderer times the people are felt to be captious if they charge even a lack of foresight. Yet foresight is what the commanders are paid for; hence the collection of the mountains of data of which they have a zealously guarded monopoly. Certainly the Chiefs of Staff made a blunder to advise Roosevelt and Churchill at Yalta that Japan would last 18 months after VE-Day. Our military men underrated Japan at the beginning of the war, then overrated it, and refused to see the patent fact, obvious to the Navy, that Japan was through even while the brasshats were meeting at Yalta.

Mr. Byrnes, in his role as apologist for the wartime agreements, off-handedly slurs over a lot of mistakes which justify some of the present-day criticism. Take our right of access to Berlin. Absence of specific agreements concerning access, according to Demaree Bess, writing in the Saturday Evening Post, was the error of the European Advisory Commission, specifically John G. Winant; though General Clay, when he was recently in Washington, admitted his own culpability. Mr. Byrnes admits in half a sentence that the agreements should have been "spelled out in more detail." He goes on to say that, agreement or not, the Soviet Union would not have been deterred from their present conduct. The same curious reasoning he applies to the Yalta agreements giving the Soviet Union a catalog of concessions in the Far East—that, in other words, they would have taken the concessions if these had not been ceded to them.

As to Europe the point, surely, is that agreements put the Western allies in a better bargaining position and placed an extra obstacle in the way of Soviet aggression. Look, for example, at Vienna. There Gen. Mark Clark saw that the details were spelled out, and the Western and the Austrian position is all the stronger for it. In the Far East the point at issue is moral. As we see it, the Western allies bought Soviet participation at China's expense in a war that, as Mr. Byrnes says, the Russians would have horned into anyway. Mr. Byrnes' record and his argument are sound enough, but his apologia for the record of others is not equally sustained.

Loyalty Review

It is evident from the detailed findings and conclusions of the Ferguson Committee that it has made a careful study of the Government's loyalty program. As a whole, the report seems to be overly critical. The major fact about the loyalty program is that it was instituted when the need for it became obvious and that President Truman later set up a judicially minded Loyalty Review Board to avoid, so far as possible, any injustice to individuals. While the constructive work done is not adequately recognized, the committee has a number of recommendations that should prove useful.

The first complaint of the committee relates to delays in getting the program into action. The Loyalty Review Board, which is responsible for formulation of policies, was set up only last December. Sixteen months after Mr. Truman's executive order was issued only 10 of the 14 regional loyalty boards had been set up by the Civil Service Commission and the loyalty regulations of some of the agencies have yet to be approved. A major complaint is that no provision for priority was made in the screening of employes in sensitive agencies. Elevator operators accused of hobnobbing with a front organization were placed on the same footing, as to the timing of investigations, as alleged espionage agents in the most sensitive Government positions. Obviously, the committee says, each case should be handled on its merits, with first attention to the areas in which the greatest damage could be done.

The committee is properly alarmed over the fact that appointments are still being made to sensitive positions without any previous loyalty check. If a spy is hired, the committee says, he may have access to confidential material for 120 days before the loyalty investigators catch up with him under present arrangements. The committee strongly urges that at least a preliminary investigation be made of all applicants before appointment and that no applicant be appointed to a sensitive job without a thorough investigation. It also calls for the disclosure of derogatory information concerning employes to agency heads before investigations are completed so as to enable them to take protective administrative measures. This course may be necessary in the case of sensitive posts, but it involves grave danger of prejudging employes before the facts are known, and we doubt that the advantages gained by such procedure in the nonsensitive agencies would equal the damage that would certainly be done to morale.

Finally, the committee concludes that "serious consideration should be given to divorcing the Loyalty Review Board from the Civil Service Commission and the establishment of an independent full-time board appointed by the President . . ." Independent boards serving the various agencies are also suggested. At present it is said agency loyalty boards act as both prosecutors and judges. Department heads are put in the position of choosing between an employe and an agency board. No doubt there is much to be said for independent boards, but such a system would run the great risk of setting up dual controls of personnel. A new system, moreover, would multiply the delays and confusion of which the committee now complains. While many of its specific suggestions are commendable, we think the present system ought to have time to prove itself before any major overhauling is undertaken.

Over the hills and far away
Is where will rise the light of day.
Lift your tired eyes from the road
On which you walk with pain for goad;

Over the hills the light befriends.

B-29 Oversold

The Washington Post's choice of news to be featured is usually excellent. But on September 5, to give "Jet Fighters Defeat B-29s in Mock Battle" a half column on page 2 seems to me to be playing down world-shaking news.

On August 30, Marshall Andrew's story that these same B-29s are America's only ready weapon was a front-page feature with illustrations leading us to believe that they are capable of bombing objectives a thousand miles or more within Soviet-dominated territory. Likewise, for many months your lead articles have presented the views of General Spaatz and the President's Air Policy Commission that our entire national defense—and offense—must be built around a long-range strategetic air force.

Now, however, we learn that over Britain our B-29s in mock battle suffered 60 per cent "losses" to jet fighters, in an area where no thousand-mile defense in depth is possible. The opinion is expressed that the trials so far have shown that modern fighters are too much for B-29s.

May I express the opinion that America has been "oversold" on the capabilities of our strategic air force, and is in for a rude awakening if it should be needed and depended upon within the next few years. Your choice of news to be featured has contributed to this overselling.

Wallace Egged

I wish I could properly evaluate the psychological reaction of E. G. (letter published September 3), who is going to vote for Wallace because someone has thrown eggs at him. I suppose it may be likened to the sympathy one has for the underdog and explains why one roots for the losing team.

In selecting a man for President of the United States, however, I believe we should go a little further than to follow our impulsive reflexes. To liken the egg-throwing to the worst Fascist and Nazi tactics is laying it on a bit thick. Egg-throwing is rich in American tradition and is usually associated with "ham" on the stage.

Which brings me back to Wallace. Anyone who imagines that Wallace is not "ham-acting" in this performance of touring the South for votes is certainly obtuse. Certainly he has the right to speak, but you will notice that Wallace is getting the columns of publicity, where the others are getting the inches. Wallace may be "teched", but to my mind he's "crazy like a fox." REALIST.

Pan American Art

This is in answer to Mr. John C. Rogers' letter of September 6 regarding the Pan American exhibit of art by the faculty of the American University.

Latin America, as well as Europe, has a much broader conception of art than the average North American whose taste unfortunately is confined to realistic illustration and condemns without any attempt at understanding new movements in art, and expects mere photographic imitation.

The State Department affair was an example of narrowness and stupidity—the so-called judges being a calendar art illustrator and various Congressmen, none of whom were qualified to pass on modern art. The same State Department pictures were highly appreciated by the Europeans. Our Latin-American neighbors are very progressive in the modern art field, and I am sure will be open minded and receive this exhibit favorably.

This show was sponsored by the American University to display our art to Latin America, and it would not have been possible to have this show on a broader basis and include outside artists without involvement and entanglements that would have taken months to straighten out. ANTHONY A. QUALIA.

Preserving History

There is great value in the discussion aroused by the sale of the Monroe house at Oak Hill, but little point in singling out any community for criticism for neglect of historic treasures. Even amateur students of history are balked a practically every point by the absence of materials which a greater respect for the records of the past would have preserved.

Leesburg, Va., is but one of thousands which do not have any group charged with the noble responsibility of collecting and properly housing newspapers, documents and other relics in addition to stimulating interest on State and national levels in securing for the public such treasures as Oak Hill. A forward looking people, Americans cannot all be expected to have a specialized interest in history, but there should be everywhere an alert group devoted to the source materials illustrative of our distinctive American civilization. Montgomery Schools

It was with much interest that I followed the machinations of the vociferous Parents' League for Curriculum Improvement in Montgomery County. At first, I felt it might be a helpful factor in tightening some of the loose ends in the school setup by focusing attention of the school people on specific weaknesses in methods of procedures of teaching, in school organization, and in parent-school relationships. It soon became apparent, however, that far from being helpful, it intended to dictate policies and personnel where it could.

The workshop open to parents certainly recognized and acted on the league's valid criticisms, and recommended the separation of social studies into components of history, geography and science for each grade. It broke down the 3R's into specific grade content. It recommended the use of textbooks for various subjects.

Further, the workshop recognized and pointed out that many parents have individual problems in their own schools, with particular subjects and certain teachers (the Parent Leaguers admitted this to be their case in several spontaneous comments) and so recommended that an advisory council be set up in each school.

So, when I read a letter on September 4 mentioning the "intolerable" situation in our schools, I was, reasonably, disturbed. Any such condemnation of Dr. Broome or his staff is most uncalled for. They have put the welfare of our children and our growth as parents among their first considerations. If in their professional wisdom and integrity they did not choose to accede to the demands they believed educationally unwise, it was obviously their responsibility to do so. RUTH T. R. NADEL.

"Freedom For Heretics"

In your September 3 editorial, "Freedom For Heretics," you took issue with the testimony of the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh of Georgetown University given before the committee investigating the FCC ruling in the so-called Scott decision.

While indorsing the FCC's recognition of reality, you have very clumsily overlooked it yourself. Reality lays bare evidence to clearly show that (1) our forefathers, who wrote this simple First Article of the Bill of Rights, were God-fearing men with little or no thought being given to the escapist philosophies of a few atheists; (2) the first article, which states that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion," has long since been violated, if you will—not just recently, but even by the men who wrote it; (3) atheism is a materialistic philosophy diametrically opposed to the Christian tenets on which Western civilization is founded.

Whether Father Walsh's interpretation of the rise of Godless dictatorships is correct, or whether they are, as you claim, the result of "restraint on freedom of thought," is too large a problem for present discussion, but it is quite possible that you may be wrong in this analysis, since your perspective of social history and constitutional history is so utterly inadequate.

You maintain that closing the air waves to atheists would be to indorse "a restraint upon expression alien to American society." What is this American society? Is it the society of our forefathers, of the nineteenth century, of the twentieth century? Or is it a combination of all these? Is the atheistic philosophy, as such, in accordance with the traditional American society? Except among atheists, the opinion seems to be that there is needed a return to the true Christian values of our civilization as an antidote to the ills that have penetrated our society.

The problem is basic. In the field of politics, we maintain that a person has the right to speak his mind as long as he does not advocate the overthrow of our system of Government. If he does, then he is a danger to our way of life, and must be dealt with as such. Where is the dividing line between the social and the political, the economic and the political, the religious and the social?

T. FRANK LINNEN.
Washington.

The position of Father Walsh on allowing radio time to atheists cannot be justified either on political or religious grounds. To restrict such freedom of speech is unconstitutional. I thank God it is so. On religious grounds it is as fundamentally wrong.

The freedom to reject God which the Creator chose to put into our minds must not be denied by those who claim to follow His plan for the world. In gaining followers Jesus Christ limited Himself to beneficent acts and to reasoning with unbelievers. His strongest urging was "Taste and see how good the Lord is." He reprimanded His own Apostles for attempting to use such props as social pressure, as being by their nature contrary to His will.

Pagan doctrines of all sorts are customarily propagated by denying free inquiry and discussion. Such methods are unseemly for Christians to use. A free choice is as much an essential of Christian doctrine as the steadfast holding to that fragment of ultimate truth which any finite mind can comprehend.

RACHEL WELCH.

Spider And Snake

The sadistic account of the contest between a spider and a snake at the home of Sergt. Robert H. Anderson which appeared in your issue of September 6, was particularly disgusting because it shows that if you are right and that is the sort of thing the public likes to read about, we have really progressed very little from the ancient Romans who delighted in spectacular events in which animals destroyed each other and human beings were bloodily murdered by other human beings or beasts.

Your article was particularly shocking because nowhere in it was there any evidence of the slightest decent or even human feeling. Indeed, your reporter said without pity that the snake was now so exhausted that the only time it showed any life was when it was prodded for the benefit of the newspaper photographers.

Democratic Revival

IT HAS been the fashion in recent months to count the Democratic Party down and out. Innumerable laments have been written and lakes of crocodile tears shed. But as Mark Twain said when he was asked to confirm or deny the rumor of his death, the report of the party's demise has been greatly exaggerated. In fact, the alleged corpse is showing aggressive signs of life.

Repeatedly in my travels through the country I heard reports of a healthy revival of growth at the grass roots. This is news that should cheer Americans of whatever conviction who believe that two parties are essential to the effective functioning of our political system.

Whether the signs of reviving life mean anything in the coming election is questionable. The division and decay had gone a long way during the past three years.

There are at least two sources of the party's returning vigor. One lies in the fact that the Democrats have far more congressional candidates who seem to stand for something positive in this uncertain world.

This is related in part to the deep convictions of such liberals as California's Helen Gahagan Douglas and Chet Holifield. That, however, is not the whole story.

In Iowa, for example, the Democratic candidate for Senator, Guy Gillette, would probably be classed as a conservative. But he has beliefs that he can express forcefully. He is reported to have a good chance of defeating the Republican incumbent, Senator George A. Wilson, who is colorless and apparently convictionless.

THE NEW leadership that is beginning to assert itself in the Democratic Party is founded in a thorough belief in the principles of the New Deal.

Younger men are replacing the tired rubber stamps and the party hacks who in some States still hold the front positions and whose names appear on many State ballots.

A second important force in the revival is the power of organized labor, which on the surface is mostly concentrated behind the Truman-Barkley ticket. How much hope President Truman is pinning on this force he made abundantly clear in his Labor Day speech.

Organized labor could conceivably wreck what appears today to be the virtual certainty of a Republican victory. Intensive trade-union political organization in key industrial areas could swing States with a decisive total of electoral votes.

That kind of intensive organization had a lot to do with the Roosevelt victory in 1944. The United Auto Workers in Michigan's industrial centers did an extraordinary job in turning out the Democratic vote. Union shop stewards used a master file on all union members.

THIS YEAR a similar effort is to be made by both the AFL and the CIO. But in my opinion it will fall short of the drive of four years ago, and, therefore, it is not likely to supply the margin of victory in the cities.

The Wallace movement has deflected some able and zealous organizers. Internal strife has torn unions such as the UAW, which is short on cash to spend for politics even if the resolution for victory were there.

To say that there is less enthusiasm for Mr. Truman than for his predecessor is to indulge in a slight understatement. A great deal of prodding will be necessary to get concerted political action from labor this fall.

Labor's most knowledgeable and politically conscious leader, Walter Reuther of the UAW, is said to be brooding over the idea of a non-Communist Labor Party. Reuther would be the leader of that party. It would begin to take shape after the November election.

Formation of a new labor party might really spell the end of the Democratic Party. Such a movement could draw the support of a large segment of labor that has refused to follow the Communist-dominated Wallace movement. It is the indifference of voters who care for neither Truman nor Dewey and who now intend to stay home on election day that can decide the outcome, and many of these are labor voters.

Perhaps it is too early to bank on the symptoms of a reviving life. They are a reality, however, regardless of what they may mean for the longer future.

"Eduard Benes"

A Communication

YOUR September 4 editorial published on the occasion of Benes' death is an attack on that statesman's judgment, on his life-long political beliefs and on his political integrity. It is written in a tone of unconcealed and malicious amusement at his misfortunes and failures. This reply does not attempt to defend the infallibility of a mortal; but I am impelled to write you because your editorial offers as justification of its views a surprising misapprehension of the underlying problems and an equally surprising misrepresentation of the facts.

Your criticism follows two main lines. On the first count Benes is attacked for his struggle in the years 1914-1918 to overthrow the Austro-Hungarian Empire and for his continuing opposition to the restoration of Hapsburgs all the rest of his life. Relying on a superficial analysis of a French author, you contend that the Allies in following this policy "fragmented the economic masterpiece of Austro-Hungary into mutually jealous states which tempted Hitler into aggression."

IT IS difficult to see how Austro-Hungary can be called an "economic masterpiece." It is true that some of its areas were complementary; but this economic interdependence was partly the result of the size of the country and was achieved at the price of an appalling underdevelopment of some areas.

It is revealing to note how slow was the economic progress of the empire in the nineteenth century compared with any of the western European countries or even with some of the countries in central Europe. Although economically the country became weaker and weaker in comparison with Germany, its main weakness lay in its political structure.

The Hapsburgs made the tragic mistake of closing their eyes to the fact that in the nineteenth century they ceased to be rulers of German states; those states had slipped out of their control and moved with even greater determination toward amalgamation with Prussia. They failed to realize that only a tiny minority of their subjects were German speaking and that there was no hope of making the empire a happy family of nations, as long as the sovereign was guided in his national policy by his insistence on being a "German prince."

The compromise, achieved at a later stage, by which two dominant nations instead of one, i.e., Austrians and Hungarians, were installed in power, remained a completely inadequate solution.

EVEN MORE dangerously significant was Austrian subservience to Germany in the foreign policy. After having been robbed of some of its most valuable provinces by Prussian kings, after having been repeatedly beaten by Prussian armies, the Hapsburgs, despite their bitter and jealous resentment of the Hohenzollerns, made their country into a mere satellite of the German Reich. In 1914 Wilhelm II had no occasion to be "tempted into aggression" of the Danubian area because it joined him under the Austro-Hungarian colors willingly and obediently.

It is naive to imply that if Austro-Hungary had existed in 1938 Hitler would not have risked war to conquer Europe. The empire would have joined him either willingly or because of its inability to resist. For the last 50 years of its existence Austro-Hungary never commanded a military power remotely comparable to that of the Germans.

I agree that a sound, cohesive and productive unit could have been an obstacle to Hitler if it were prepared for war—but even such country could not have stopped Hitler if its western Allies were completely unprepared. In any event, any scheme of a federation based on the assumption of the restoration of the Hapsburgs would have been utterly futile; no empire can be built on nonexistent feelings—and there was a complete lack of attachment and loyalty to the House of Hapsburg in the peoples they had once ruled.

But along with the absolute opposition to a Hapsburg restoration, the need for creating a powerful unit in central Europe was always felt strongly by some of the nations concerned, especially by the Czechs and Slovaks whose leading citizens of the last two centuries, including the more recent political figures like Masaryk, Benes, Hodza and others, cherished the idea of developing a federation in central Europe.

Certainly in this country there should be no difficulty in realizing that a fundamental condition of federation is the willingness of the potential participants to join and live together; true federation cannot be achieved when one nationality oppresses another. One of the main obstacles on the road to a federation were the tremendous differences in economic, cultural and consequently political standards between the successor states as they emerged from the ruins of the empire.

THERE IS reason to believe that German aggression could have been averted with or without a Danubian federation, if France and Britain had been half as well prepared as that small country, Czechoslovakia. Indeed, central Europe was no final target for Hitler as the year 1940 proved. It may even be true that military resistance by Czechoslovakia alone in 1938 would have stopped Germany for a time.

Mr. Churchill, also quoted in your editorial, would probably have found in 1938 that a great majority of Czechoslovakia shared his opinion that the best thing was to fight. Here, by surrendering, Mr. Benes, I believe, acted against the popular feeling in his country.

I find it, however, difficult to accept the argument that if Germany had continued with the conflict, France would have entered the war because of sympathy for the brave Czechoslovaks. Unhappy France found herself unable to undertake any significant military action even a year later when she was already at war and for still another year she did not even annoy the Nazi Reich while Britain limited her activity to sea warfare. It was only when the Germans chose to strike at them that the phony war in the west changed into a real.

THE SECOND line of criticism is aimed at Benes' attempt to arrive at an understanding with Russia. After what has been revealed in the last two years it seems absurd to insinuate that Benes by negotiating an alliance with Russia had destroyed the prospect of an "eastern federation under democratic auspices."

Unfortunately the foresight and determination necessary to secure democracy in central and early Europe were conspicuously absent in more decisive quarters than Czechoslovakia; Benes acted merely in realization of the situation as it actually existed. It was with no enthusiasm or confidence that he started on his way to Moscow. Doubt and worry were with him for his remaining years. One must not be mislead by the apparent optimism of his statements, for to inspire hope was a part of his deadly struggle for his country.

Obviously he never gave up his belief that his fight was worth-while despite the unpleasantness and humiliation involved and despite the small chance of victory. Looking back at his efforts to preserve a democratic way of life within the Soviet orbit, I am inclined to believe that its success would have had a much wider significance than for his country only. It would have proved that east and west were not so desperately far apart; it would have proved Russian tolerance.

His failure seems to be grim evidence of the opposite. But how can he be blamed for having tried? Are we not even now striving to make this a lasting peace, even though we no longer suffer from our illusions?

Committee Finds School 'Unsatisfactory'

The Washington Post

CHECK UP—Negro leaders from Richmond inspect a classroom in the King George Training School. They are (from left) W. Lester Banks, executive secretary of the Virginia State Conference, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Martin A. Martin, attorney; J. Ruppert Picott, executive secretary of the Virginia State Teachers Association, and Spotswood W. Robinson, attorney. They found conditions "entirely unsatisfactory"

King George School 'Equalization' Test Begun

of two Virginia counties directed by Federal District Court Judge Sterling Hutcheson to place Negro schools on a par with white facilities.

Court orders against this county and Gloucester County were issued July 31, after an unprecedented decision last spring. Surry County, in a third case settled by consent decree, was given to September 15 to report corrective action on equalization of buildings, courses and teachers' salaries.

When the King George Training School (for Negro pupils, grades 1 to 11) opened this morning, four Richmond Negro leaders here to "check", on compliance with the Federal equalization order, termed conditions at the school "completely unsatisfactory."

Despite some improvements to the school, said Martin, "in our opinion nothing substantial has been done at all—certainly not enough to make it equal to the white King George High School."

Gloucester Action Today

While action is under way here Thursday another group of Negro leaders is scheduled to appear at Gloucester County—on Chesapeake Bay, due east of Richmond—where schools open Thursday, to make their own check of equalization progress there.

Gayle

When the Negro group appears for registration at the white school in King George County on Thursday, T. Benton Gayle, superintendent of schools for both King George and Stafford Counties, will read them the sections of the State Code and the Virginia Constitution that deal with segregation.

"I anticipated such a registration back in July," said Galye, "and wrote to G. Tyler Miller, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, asking if we could enroll Negro children in white schools. He wrote me on July 19, referring to the State Constitution and the State Code, which specifically prohibit teaching whites and Negroes in the same school."

"Until some Federal Court says the Virginia Constitution and the code are null and void," said Gayle firmly, "I'm abiding by them."

Negro school facilities in King George County received a separate blow from an unexpected quarter late today when the State Supreme Court of Appeals refused to order the release of some five million dollars in State retirement funds planned to be lent for school construction.

Expected $40,000

"I don't know what we will do now," said Gayle, "for in that sum was our request for $40,000 which we were going to spend for a central heating plant and sanitary facilities at the Negro training school.

"The logical solution is a regional Negro high school for Fredericksburg City and King George and Stafford Counties. The officials are all for it, but the Negroes are opposed on the ground that their children will have to travel too far to reach it. "Yet, even if we had a million dollars to spend for a Negro high school in King George County," said Gayle, "it would still not help out, for there are not enough Negro pupils in the county for them to have an accredited high school."

Last year, the King George Training School (many Negro schools in Virginia with classes up to the eleventh or twelfth grade carry the "training school" designation) had an enrollment of 380 in its 3 frame buildings about 4 miles outside this town.

Its first, second, third and sixth grades are in one building, and its fifth, fourth and seventh grades in a wing of the so-called high school. The third building is a combination home economics center with a small cafeteria where teachers said "very good" lunches were served last year for 20 cents each.

The school has 12 classrooms and 13 instructors, including E. B. Webb, principal since 1936. Gayle said the school board was not notified of the formal equalization order until August 5, and "we did what we could in that little time to improve things."

Reporters, who accompanied the Richmond "inspection team" around the school grounds, found that the classrooms are heated by coal stoves, most of them made out of 50-gallon oil drums. The classrooms have running water, and similar facilities were recently installed in the science room.

Other visible equipment in the science "lab" consisted of a new mocroscope for slide projections, three bottles of acid, a dozen test tubes, a two-burner gas stove not yet connected, and several insect specimens. The home economics building was best equipped, with electric stoves and a refrigerator, plus chairs and tables.

A new drill press was being installed in the agricultural vocational class, which has several other pieces of equipment.

The school, for the first time, is establishing a commercial course, and Gayle yesterday brought in 10 new typewriters and a mimeograph machine.

No Indoor Toilets

A full-time janitor is being sought. There are no indoor toilet facilities; a new outhouse (one of three) has recently been installed for girls. The entire school plant is generally clean, but has the appearance of well-worn poverty.

Webb's office is a small shack, with what was formerly the school's only typewriter, and no telephone (there are none in the school).

Heaped up in Webb's office yesterday were 2000 recently delivered dust-covered books. "I think they came from the Fredericksburg Library," said Webb, shaking his head. "They'll do very little good, in my opinion."

While some of the books are probably useful, the following were selected by reporters at random:

"The Rollo Code of Morals, or The Rules of Duty for Children" (copyright 1841); "Annual Report of the Rockefeller Foundation"; "Annual Report of the Carnegie Endowment"; "The Medical Department of the United States Army in World War I"; "The Literary Remains of the Late Willis Gaylord Clark" (copyright 1851); "The Call of the Cumberlands"; "Love Letters of a Worldly Woman"; "Hungarian Celebrities, London, 1851"; 10 volumes of the Bell Telephone Quarterly; dozen of old German novels and technical books, dated in the 1800s—although the school has no language courses whatsoever.

In Center of City

The King George County High School (for whites, grades 1 to 12) is in the center of this city, occupying a stucco building dating from 1823, and a brick building completed in 1939 with Public Works Administration funds.

The school has 19 teachers, in addition to Principal William L. Smith, jr., and an enrollment of about 500. (There are also two small elementary schools in the county for white students, and two one-room elementary schools for Negroes.)

In the white high schools are regular toilet facilities, central heating, and showers, plus a combination auditorium-gymnasum in the brick building, telephones, etc.

Workmen yesterday were painting sections of the brick building, where the high school classes are held, and remodeling the stucco building to make room for two more classrooms and a library by eliminating about half the auditorium there.

Smith said the school plant in past years has been so crowded that classes have been held in the basement.

In what Webb described as a "complete surprise to me," Smith yesterday was named supervising principal of both the Negro and white "high schools."

Asked the reason for this Superintendent Gayle said that "with the addition of a commercial course at the Negro school, they need more supervision there; they need help. It's a better administrative setup."

Gayle said the move involves no salary changes. He said Webb is employed on a nine-month basis and receives $1900 a year. Smith, employed on a 12-month basis, gets $3600 a year, said Gayle.

Two teachers under Webb actually receive far more than their principal. The Negro economics teacher receives $2230 a year, and the agriculture teacher $2620 a year, said Gayle, because part of their pay comes from Federal funds under the Smith-Lever Act.

"You must remember," said Gayle, "that King George is a very poor county—it's total assessment is only $2,200,000. The school tax rate of $1 per thousand produces only $22,000 and the county board of supervisors gives the schools $17,000 a year from liquor license funds. That gives us $39,000 from local sources to run the county's schools. Last year the total school budget was $143,000.

"You just can't run a school system properly with such funds."

Retirement Funds Denied To Va. Schools

Staunton, Va., Sept. 8 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today refused to order the release of State retirement funds for local school construction.

In a 5-to-2 decision, the court refused to force the State comptroller and the State treasurer to turn over some five million dollars of retirement funds to the State literary fund for loans to localities.

It denied Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr.'s petition for a writ of mandamus. He brought the action against the State fiscal officials in behalf of the State Board of Education.

Comptroller Henry G. Gilmer and Treasurer Jesse W. Dillon had declined to release the money on ground that they doubted the constitutionality of the 1946 and 1947 legislation that made it permissible.

The majority opinion was written by Justice Willis D. Miller, with Chief Justice Hudgins and Associate Justices Eggleston, Spratley and Buchanan concurring.

Justices Staples and Gregory dissented, and Staples was understood to be preparing an opinion in support of the minority view, which will be handed down later in Richmond.

There was a strong likelihood in the meantime that school officials will ask the Governor to turn over the expected State surplus to the exhausted literary fund. The surplus for the last year has been estimated at 20 million dollars.

The ruling did not affect Fairfax County, according to Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson, because the county has already spent its $365,000 share of the anticipated loan.

When the transfer was authorized, Woodson said, the county, with approval of the State oBard of Education, let contracts and started building with its allotment.

After the five million dollars had been tied up in the court suit, the State board took unused literary fund loans granted to other counties to pay for the work already begun in Fairfax.

Justice Miller said the channeling of retirement fund moneys through the literary fund would simply be giving them temporary "color" as literary fund money because the interest on the indebtedness would be paid by the localities into the retirement fund.

"It should also be observed that Section 134 of the constitution dedicates the literary fund to school purposes and Section 135 directs the use of the interest thereon for the same purpose," the majority opinion said.

"Yet if this contemplated transaction be consummated, the annual interest to be paid upon these proposed obligations will not go into the literary fund as required of loans of that fund but will go into the retirement fund."

The opinion concluded that an amendment to the retirement act that would have permitted its funds to be lent to the literary fund and an amendment by the special session of 1947 to permit the fund to charge the localities 3 per cent on such loans were in violation of the constitution.

Chief Justice Hudgins handed down an opinion concurring with the majority view.

He said that "stripped of all circumlocution" the main question was whether the retirement fund's board of trustees could use the trust funds to purchase bonds or notes of the school boards of the counties without the question of the local borrowing being submitted to the voters.

"The answer to the question depends upon whether the school boards have the authority without the approval of the electors of the respective counties to incur such indebtedness," the chief justice wrote.

"If a county school board has such authority, then the board of trustees may purchase the bonds direct from the local school board, from a licensed broker, from the State board, or from any other party who has the legal right to sell them.

"If a school board has no authority to incur such indebtedness without the approval of the electors, then neither the board of trustees nor any other party can buy or sell an enforceable interest in such obligations."

Hudgins noted that the Legislature had broad power to authorize the State or any of its political subdivisions to incur long-term debts. He pointed out, however, that there were limitations of this power written in the constitution of Virginia.

One on the Aisle—

Laughs Actually Burden a Comedy

By Richard L. Coe

IN "GOOD SAM," Keith's has a good many laughs, which is, to be sure, why the picture was made.

Still, I couldn't help thinking serious thoughts while watching it, which is no sign of the truly successful comedy. Gary Cooper and Ann Sheridan have a good many amusing scenes and Leo McCarey has directed slews of supporting players in funny bits. For all that, "Good Sam" is overlong and disjointed.

The trouble is largely one that hits all pictures designed to show that material things are unimportant, that money isn't everything. Every time the movies tackle this highly laudable theme, their outcome defeats their purpose. The hero always gets promoted to a fatter income; the heroine always gets her Bendix.

Mr. McCarey patently would like to believe that money isn't everything, but after a struggle which drags out to two hours, he finally concludes that if you do give away all you possess, even more will come floating back to you on the waters.

However Biblical this proverb called "Good Sam" may be, I'm afraid its author, Ken Englund, and Director McCarey haven't been skillful enough to disguise their distrust. They protest too much. And, furthermore, the six thousand bucks which comes the Cooper-Sheridan way wouldn't begin to be the down payment on the snazzy furnished nest they latch onto.

This attitude, I grant you, is a pretty ungrateful way to treat a comedy, but since Messrs. McCarey and Englund all too clearly have had their troubles, too, it's justified.

"GOOD SAM." RKO-Radio release produced for Rainbow Productions by Leo McCarey. Screen play by Ken Englund from a story by John Klorer and McCarey. Directed by Mr. McCarey. Music by Robert Emmett Dolan. Photographed by George Barnes. At Keith's.

A Willing Samaritan

Mr. Cooper's Sam is a do-gooder, a massive one, at that. He lends a bespectacled neighbor his car and is sued for the damages that ensue. He lends all the money he and his wife have been saving for a house to a young couple so they can have a baby AND, I presume, the gasoline station which eventually redeems his losses. He's hospitable to a conniving garage mechanic whose wife is a real estate agent. He plays godfather to an unhappy girl at the store where he's employed. He's a haven to his brother-in-law, a dissatisfied veteran.

For the comic values, Writer Englund depicts all these recipients of favors as being the basest ingrates, which strikes me as being the most cynical aspect of his story. The pleasant preacher, the generous banker, the appreciative employer simply are straw men to resolve the problem. Again, the wife, played with the most winning humor by Miss Sheridan, is only a convenient puppet. She's generally depicted as shrewd, except when, for purposes of laughter, she becomes the nelpless type.

I've gone into all this because from their inability to end their story, Englund and McCarey have revealed their uncertainty and lack of discipline. For the sake of individual scenes, which are funny enough, they have sacrificed what is essentially a good story. Each time they have thought of a laugh sequence, they've stuck it in—Sam stopping buses for late passengers, Sam being kindly to customers at the store, Sam being stuck for a bill by a garage man. Had they had the discipline and restraint their story needed, this might have been a lean, sharp comment on the generous souls we all know well. As it is, it's a farcical foray, and most people will probably enjoy it as much as a cherished friend who, alas, may be that no longer.

Hiss Car Witnesses Testify; Atom-Bomb Scientist Called

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

A St. Louis chemistry professor who worked on the wartime atomic bomb was subpenaed yesterday for secret questioning by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

At the same time, the committee summoned an alleged Pennsylvania Communist leader. Chairman Thomas (R., N. J.) said both would be questioned soon but would not reveal how either might be connected with the committee's probe of Communist espionage here.

The scientist is Dr. Martin Kamen, of Washington University at St. Louis, who has said he was innocently involved with some Russians while working on atomic energy during the war. The other witness is Steve Wilson, reported to have recently become chairman of the Communist Party of western Pennsylvania. Neither has been questioned before.

During the day the committee heard four witnesses, all Washington residents, in secret session in an effort to clear up the mystery of what became of a 1929 Ford roadster which is a key item in the Red spy hearings. Whittaker Chambers, a senior editor of Time Magazine and confessed former Communist courier, has testified Alger Hiss, former State Department official, told him he wanted to give the automobile to a Communist worker. Hiss has testified he gave the Ford to Chambers.

First of yesterday's witnesses was Mrs. William Rosen, 2020 Shepherd st. ne., who declined to discuss the committee's line of questioning. District Motor Vehicle Department records show Hiss sold a 1929 Ford in July, 1936, to the Cherner Motor Co., which resold it the same day to a William Rosen.

Other witnesses were:

Louis Rosenberg, a partner of Benjamin B. Bialek in the Petworth Pharmacy, 4201 Georgia ave. nw. Bialek's address was given by the William Rosen who bought the automobile.

Irving Farrell, a pharmacist employed in the Petworth Pharmacy.

Registration Days Set for New Voters

General registration days in Prince Georges County, Md., for new voters will be September 28 and October 5 from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. in the 46 voting places of the county.

New voters who have declared their intention of becoming county citizens at least one year before November 2 of this year will be eligible to register to vote in the presidential elections. Persons who became 21 while residing in Maryland may register without having declared intention.

In addition, the Board of Election Supervisors has arranged for registration of new voters Monday through Friday from 8:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. in the board's offices in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro, Md. All who can go to Marlboro and register are urged to do so in order to avoid crowds at the registration places on the two registration days, James B. Berry, clerk to the board, announced.

Approximately 11,000 persons have been removed from the books because they failed to vote for five years and approximately 6000 have been added to the books in the past year. It is expected that approximately 45,000 will be eligible to vote in the November 2 elections.

Prince Georges Firemen Hold Convention Friday-Saturday

The twenty-sixth convention of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen's Association will be held Friday night and Saturday at Cottage City, Md. The annual meeting of the auxiliary will be held Friday.

Registration of an expected 1000 delegates, including five from each of the 30 member departments, will be from 6 to 8 p. m. Friday at the Cottage City Firehouse.

The first business session will begin at 8 p. m. with T. Weston Scott, sr., former chief of the Cottage City department, presiding. Invocation will be given by Chaplain James E. Sampson of Brentwood. W. A. Bobb, president of the host department, and Town Councilman Carl Minnick will welcome the delegates to Cottage City. Chief T. Alan Penn of Clinton will respond and then take over the convention for nomination of officers.

The auxiliary will meet in Cottage City Elementary School and will elect officers Friday night.

A parade, starting at 1 p. m., will inaugurate the program on Saturday. It will form at 43d ave. and Bladensburg rd., led by the Washington Police Band, proceed to 37th ave., to Parkwood st., and then to Cottage City School, 40th ave. and Parkwood st., where contests and demonstrations will begin at 2 p. m.

Memorial services for firemen who have died since the last convention will be conducted at 7:30 p. m. by the Rev. David E. Gregory, pastor of Wilson Avenue Baptist Church, Colmar Manor. Officers will be elected and installed at a business meeting at 8 p. m. The newly elected auxiliary officers also will be installed at this time. A dance at the firehouse will conclude the program.

Taking Pictures

Capture Fall Foliage With Color Camera

By Ollie Atkins

WITH the fall season closing in on us we can expect clear skies and colorful foliage which should make every photographer think in terms of natural color pictures.

Washington is situated with both shore and mountains less than two hours' drive away and within the city itself are abundant parks and public buildings, all of which make ideal subjects for color pictures.

It is not easy to make good pictures in color. Correct exposure is essential for accurate reproduction. Films even of the same manufacturer vary. The use of filters in color photography is still somewhat of a mystery and guessing game even to so-called color experts.

One rule I am positive of is to shoot only general views unless supplementary lighting is available to illuminate shadow areas in close-ups. Harsh shadows do not reproduce well in color photography.

Use of an exposure meter is mandatory. If you know you have a good picture before your lens, shoot the meter reading and another one stop larger than the meter indicated. To be positive you have captured the image on your color film try a stop less than meter indication. This means three exposures and three expensive color films to get one picture. I speak from experience, though, when I tell you it is one pretty certain method of getting at least one good transparency.

THE National Press Photographers Association group, including news, newsreel and magazine photographers throughout the country, announces the publication of the "Press Photography Annual." The book will be the first authoritative handbook on press photography and will be very useful for press photographers, editors and journalism students, for free lance photographers and everyone interested in pictures and photographic journalism. Persons interested in further information may write to Press Photography Annual, 271 Madison ave., New York 16, N. Y.

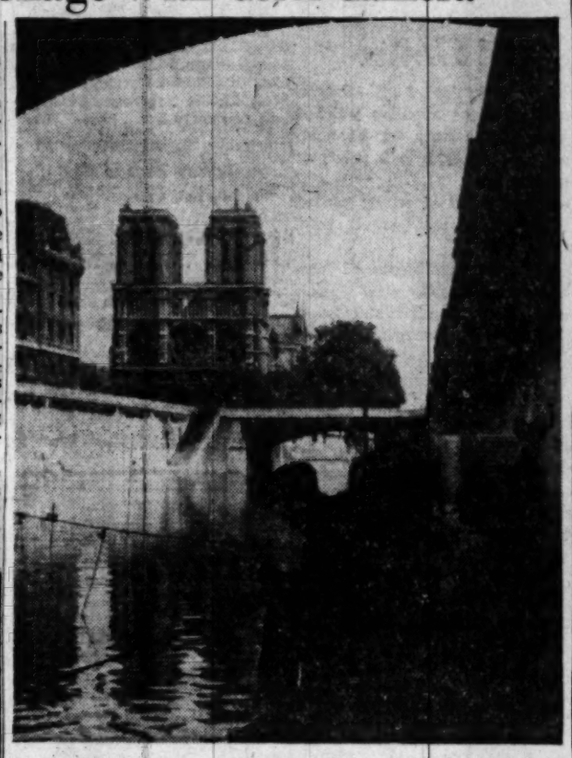
All pictures made since last October 1 with a Graflex, Graphic, Crown or Century camera by photographers anywhere in the world will be eligible. There are no limitations on subject matter and photographers will be divided into three classes: Teen-agers, nonprofessionals and professionals. A special color division will be open to all three classes.

Each contestant may submit as many as 10 black-and-white and five color entries. Entry forms and copies of the official rules are now in the hands of all Graflex dealers. Each picture must be accompanied by official entry form.

Judges at the color competition of the Old Dominion Camera Club, 313 N Glebe rd., next Monday will be P. F. Lambert, Gladys Hamlin and Mrs. Charles Baptie.

AIM FOR THE YEAR—take fewer snapshots and more pictures that command and hold attention. View taken from September edition of the Finder, official publication of the National Photographic Society.



NOT ALL OF US can get the unusual opportunity to travel that John Dobberteen, 3620 S. Taylor st., Arlington, has as an overseas pilot. He clicked this picture of Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris recently. Exposure was on Plus-X film, 1/25th second at f/8.

New AIB Peak In Enrollment Expected Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

An enrollment exceeding last year's record 537 is anticipated when the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, resumes classes on October 4, President Herbert D. Lawson said yesterday.

Plans were discussed last night at a dinner meeting of the advisory committee, faculty and chapter officers in the Mayflower Hotel.

Three new instructors have been appointed. They are Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, vice president and cashier of Second National Bank; George Earnshaw, vice president of National Metropolitan Bank, and Herbert R. Grossman, local attorney. Fitzpatrick and Earnshaw will teach Fundamentals of Banking, and Grossman will instruct in Negotiable Instruments (Law Two).

Warren Forester, vice president of Hamilton National Bank, will teach the restored course of Bank Administration.

Among those attending last night's meeting were: Walton L. Sanderson, chairman of the chapter's advisory committee; Francis E. Robey, Paul J. Seltzer, John M. Christie and Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, members of the committee; Ralph Endicott, dean of the faculty, and Robert H. Lacey, president of the District Bankers Association.

MERGER POSSIBLE: James Carmichael, president of Capital Airlines, said here yesterday his company has merger possibilities with three other airlines but "no conclusions have been reached and nothing is in sight." Carmichael named Braniff, National and Delta as the airlines with which Capital has conducted "informal discussions." He said he felt consolidation of Capital, formerly known as Pennsylvania-Central, with one or more other airlines might result in more economical operation. He stressed, however, that the discussions had not gone beyond the informal stage.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Here's a record for local insurance men to shoot at—$1,213,000 of new life insurance written by one agent in one month! That's what Chan C. Mason, insurance broker of 1010 Vermont ave., produced in August. The business was written on the lives of 10 prominent local business men and was placed with the J. D. Marsh & Associates agency of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. Mason has been in the insurance field for more than 20 years, starting in Texas and coming to Washington in 1930.

PEPCO COMMENT: Auchincloss, Parker and Redpath in current market letter says in part: "It is our considered opinion that Potomac Electric common stock ranks among the highest grade utility equities on the market. As the stock becomes more seasoned and the investing public recognizes the safeguards to steady earnings and dividends afforded by the Modified Sliding Scale Plan, it should sell on a yield and price times earnings basis comparable to other top-grade utilities." The investment firm estimated that Pepco net earnings for this year would equal $1.13 a common share, amply covering the dividend of 90 cents a share.

SPECIAL PARLEY: The newly formed Washington Chapter of the National Electrical Retailers Association will hold a special meeting on September 15 in the Mayflower Hotel, starting at 2 p. m. C. C. Simpson of Chicago, managing director, will be one of the speakers. H. S. Smith, Washington, will preside at the session.

SEARS' RECORDS: Sears Roebuck and Co. reported gross August sales totaled $193,813,128, an increase of 23.1 per cent over the $157,404,627 total in August, 1947. For the first seven months of the company's fiscal year, the totals were $1,315,898,671, an increase of 23.3 per cent over the $1,067,055,953 in the comparable period a year ago. Both 1948 totals were the highest respectively in the company's history, a spokesman added.

OFFERING: New financing yesterday included the first public offering of Television Fund, Inc., an investment company specializing in the field of television, electronics and radio. The prospectus for the offering covers an issue of 2,500,000 shares at $9.81 a share. It is in addition to 12,500 shares previously issued at private sale last May.

ODD LOTS: Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index declined on September 7 to $6.86 from $6.90 a week ago . . . Crawford Clothes, Inc., clothing manufacturers and retailers, will sell men's clothing through a leased department in Mandel Brothers, Chicago department store . . . Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. has waived order rights for 71 sleeping cars from the Pullman Co. because of rapid development of its own "Train X" type cars. Another factor in the waiver action, a C. & O. spokesman said, was that Pullman's car prices had advanced from $90,000 to $185,000 each because of an escalator clause in the contract

Tests May Help Races 'Get Along'

Boston, Sept. 8 (AP).—The first psychological test designed to help Negroes to get along better with whites was reported to the American Psychological Association today.

The specific object is to help those Negroes who go to work with whites in situations where race prejudice exists, or where their relations with whites call for diplomacy.

The test was reported by Charles F. Thompson of Tulane University. It arose from his experience with Negro veterans in New Orleans, when he tried to use the regular psychological tests given to white people to learn such things as how a man or woman will get along with fellow workers, and how to make allies.

The white psychological test revealed that Negroes are likely to think of whites as aliens. It is the same thing as the old saying, "All Chinamen look alike." Whites have been found by psychologists who think nearly all Negroes look alike.

The white test is a series of pictures, originated by Dr. Henry A. Murray of Harvard. A person looks at them and tells the story of what he thinks the picture means, and psychologists are able to discern in this story an outline of the subject's abilities to get along with other people.

The Murray pictures all are of white people. When Mr. Thompson tried this test on the Negro GIs, he got flat, wooden answers. The colored men didn't seem to know what a white man or woman would do. The whites were just fixed types to them.

Thompson then substituted pictures of Negro men and women. Immediately he got interesting answers. He then formed a psychological test, based on the material in the Murray pictures, but changing the race, and also changing some of the details to fit Negro experiences.

From these pictures the psychologists get from Negroes the same information that whites give.

Civil Service Hearing Order Hit by Rees

Chairman Edward H. Rees (Kans.) of the House Civil Service Committee yesterday criticized President Truman's recent order curtailing right of Federal employes in efficiency-rating appeals. He issued a statement saying:

"I have just been advised that the President, upon the recommendation of the Civil Service Commission, approved an order denying Federal employes the right to an oral hearing before efficiency rating boards of review in connection with appeals from efficiency ratings. This is a direct violation of a provision of law which has been in effect since November 26, 1940.

"The law provides that any Federal employe who appeals his efficiency rating is entitled, as a matter of right, to a hearing before an efficiency rating board of review and shall be afforded the opportunity to submit pertinent information orally to such board. The law also provides that the employe who appeals his efficiency rating shall be afforded an opportunity to hear, examine, and reply to information submitted to other parties to the efficiency rating board of review.

"This is a matter of vital concern to all Federal employes because efficiency ratings are used as a basis upon which promotions are given in Federal service, and also used as a basis upon which Federal employes are retained in the service when reductions-in-force are necessary. This denial of an opportunity for Federal employes to present efficiency rating boards of review with pertinent information is a serious invasion of the long-established civil service rights of Federal employes.

"I shall request the President to amend his order of August 17, 1948, by eliminating that section which denies Federal employes this Civil Service right, to which they are justly entitled. This is another example of how, during the past several years, executive orders or administrative actions have nullified existing law protecting the rights of our citizens."

Peasants, Led By Reds, Raid Polish Farms

Warsaw, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Communist Party's call for a "class war" among Poland's 15 million peasants appeared to be off to a flying start today.

Reports from rural districts around Warsaw and Lublin said small farmers led by Communists were ripping down fences dividing large individual farms. Other reports said Communist groups were smashing tractors owned by "rural capitalists."

Communist action committees were engaged in "educating" the peasants that their production must be sent to market through cooperatives at fixed prices on a common basis.

Hilary Minc, minister of industry and commerce, declared rural capitalists must go. But he promised quick punishment for all who try to force peasants to join in a Communist land socialization scheme immediately. He told party activists to go slowly because a hard battle lies ahead.

Nizam Spurns Troops' Aid In Hyderabad

Madras, India, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Moslem Nizam of Hyderabad has rejected as "out of the question" the sending of Indian troops into his predominantly Hindu state.

A virtual ultimatum was given yesterday by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru for reentry of Indian troops into Secunderabad and disarmament of the Razakars, a Moslem volunteer armed group in Hyderabad.

The Nizam has steadfastly refused demands that Hyderabad become a part of the Indian dominion. In an exchange with India's Governor General Chakravarthi Rajogopalachari, the Nizam declared:

"The matter of allowing Indian troops to remain in my territory is out of the question. My own troops are able to satisfactorily guard life and property of my own subjects and are fully capable of dealing with the situation."

19 Holidayers Killed In Spanish Bus Wreck

Madrid, Spain, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Nineteen passengers were burned to death and 12 injured seriously today when a bus en route from Madrid to a fiesta at the nearby village of Del Monte Detajo went out of control and plunged into a canyon.

September 18 Proclaimed as Air Force Day

President Truman yesterday proclaimed September 18 as Air Force Day in tribute to the men and women who have "contributed to the growth of American air power."

Air Force Day has been observed in the past on August 1. The date was changed, a spokesman said, because September 18 is the first anniversary of the creation of an independent air force under the national military establishment.

Mr. Truman also named Col. Reginald C. Harmon to a four-year term as the first judge advocate general of the Air Force with the rank of major general.

The law merging the armed forces a year ago established that office for the first time.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

FOR THE FIRST TIME in 31 years, Jimmy Dykes is without a baseball job. They handed James his severance pay as manager of the Hollywood club of the Coast League the other day, and he's foraging for another managerial berth. He won't be long in the ranks of the unemployed. Door will always open for his kind of manager.

POVICH

At Hollywood, his club was in the second division but Dykes' Chicago White Sox teams were mostly second-division outfits, too, and that fact couldn't obscure Dykes' talents as a manager. At Chicago the wonder was that Dykes could escape the cellar with such meager scrapings of minor leaguers and major league retreads that populated his teams.

Dykes' teams may have played bad baseball, but they were never dull. They were the running-est teams in the league and getting a blank check from Dykes whenever they thought they could steal a base, the White Sox used to steal twenty games a season. A typical White Sox rally was composed of a base on balls, a stolen base, a sacrifice and a squeeze bunt.

Jimmy was never content with a dull ball game, win or lose. White Sox fans may have been disappointed, but they were never a bored lot. Dykes could always pick a lively argument with the umpires, as a last resort.

HE WAS THROWN OUT of more games than any other big league manager. His fines during one season totaled more than the salary he used to make when he broke in with the Athletics back in 1919. Umpires used to tremble at his approach after Dykes called time from the dugout and walked to the plate to accuse 'em of everything from simple malfeasance to highway robbery.

Jimmy was especially wroth at the umpire during a series with the Yankees at Comiskey Park a few years back. He challenged every decision favoring the Yankees and lost all of 'em. But that did'nt deter him from dashing from the dugout in the first inning of the series finale and questioning Umpire Bill Grieve's judgment on the first pitch of the game.

When he could get no reversal of the decision, Dykes played his trump eard. Grabbing his White Sox cap from his head, he flung it away, reached into his hip pocket and extracted a Yankee cap. He put it on and stuck his jaw in Grieve's face and pointing to his new cap, said: "This ought to help me get a decision from you." It did. It evoked Grieve's decision to throw his out of the game.

HE WAS ONE of Connie Mack's good ball players for 14 seasons, and the good third baseman of those pennant-winning teams of 1929-30-31. He was out of position at third base—a converted second baseman—but that didn't make much difference. He was effective, if not fancy. It was rare when he fielded a ball cleanly, but he would knock it down with his glove, chest or head if necessary, and his superb throwing arm took care of the rest of the play.

There has always been a suspicion that Dykes would be called in by Connie Mack to take over the management of the Athletics whenever Mr. Mack decided to retire. Certainly he was one of Mack's favorite ball players, and it was with a wrench of the heartstrings that he was sold to the White Sox in 1933 in a year when Mr. Mack needed the money.

The Comiskey family retained him as manager for 12 years with little idea of replacing him until Leslie O'Connor moved in as business manager. Shortly thereafter Dykes heard rumors he would be replaced. In midseason he went to O'Connor and said "these rumors are hurting my authority over the players. I want a new contract." O'Connor told him his authority over the players had ended because the rumors were correct and Teddy Lyons would be the new Sox manager.

WHILE HE WAS with the White Sox, Dykes held court before the game in the White Sox dressing room, never venturing onto the field until just before game time, in contrast to other managers in the league. Dykes left to his lieutenants the job of supervising the infield and pregame batting practice.

"Why should I bother about watching the pregame practice," he used to say. "Those guys can't show me anything in 20 minutes that I don't know about 'em already."

As late as 1940, Dykes still retained himself on the active list and did some pinch-hitting for the White Sox. He put himself in to pinch-hit against Washington one day and lined a long drive off the left field wall and puffed around the bases. Trying to stretch it he was out by 20 feet going into third base. Returning to the dugout, he moaned, "Dammit, it took me 20 years to learn how to hit in this league, and now I can't run."

"LET'S TRY IT NOW" "IT LOOKS ALL RIGHT SO FAR" "HERE'S THE WAY IT'S DONE" "THAT'S BETTER, BOYS"

15,000 Tickets Go on Sale; Bivins Arrives Here Today

Fifteen thousand general admission tickets go on sale this morning for Monday night's Griffith Stadium fight between Ezzard Charles and Jimmy Bivins.

Shortly after the Turner's Arena ticket office opens, Bivins is scheduled to arrive from Madam Bey's training quarters in New Jersey.

The Cleveland heavy holds his first local workout at Turner's at 1 p. m. Charles, who has been drilling here for about a week takes over in the same ring two hours later.

Interest in the heavyweight championship elimination bout is reflected in this list of boxing luminaries who have wired Matchmaker Gabe Menendez for reservations.

They include Sol Strauss and Nat Rogers of Twentieth Century Club, Andy Nedereitter, promoter for the Tournament of Champions, Herman Taylor, Philadelphia promoter, Felix Bochicchio, manager of Jersey Joe Walcott and Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring magazine.

The odds on Charles have dropped from 3-1 to 9-5 and may go down further before ring time. Reason behind the shortened odds is Jimmy Bivins' conscientious efforts to get in shape. Bevins has blamed his past two losing showings against Charles on his haphazard conditioning. He's been working six weeks for this fight.

Athletics Recall Earle Brucker, Jr.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—The Philadelphia Athletics announced today that they had recalled Rookie Catcher Earle Brucker, jr., from Savannah of the South Atlantic League. He will report to the Athletics at Washington Friday.

Brucker, a son of the Athletics' battery coach, is a bonus player. He signed an Athletic contract last June after receiving a $30,000 bonus.

Garibaldi's Son Is Baxter's Undoing

Mrs. Garibaldi didn't raise her son to be a wrestler, but he was a good one last night at Turner's. The 18-year-old Leo teamed with his father, Gino, and defeated Babe Sharkey and Laverne Baxter in two of three falls in the feature match.

In other matches Marvin Mercer and George Macricostas drew; Tony Verdin pinned Jesse James and Ace Freeman defeated Joe Kamaroff.

Reds Sign Walters to Pilot in '49

Cincinnati, Sept. 8 (U.P.).—Bucky Walters, satisfied after a month as a major league manager, today signed a contract to skipper the Cincinnati Reds next season.

Walters

Walters took over as manager of the club when Johnny Neun was fired August 8. But at the time the 38-year-old former National League pitching sensation insisted that he sign a contract only for the remainder of this season.

"Let's see how I do first," he said.

Today, even though the Reds were still in the seventh place where he inherited the club, Walters apparently was satisfied with the job—and Red President Warren Giles also was happy.

So they went into a huddle in Giles' office, and after a brief conference announced that Walters had signed to manage the club next season. The salary terms were not revealed.

Bucky revealed that he will remain on the active list as a pitcher even though he has lost both of his decisions this season. "You see," he smiled, "I've won 198 in my career. I want to make that 200 before I quit as a pitcher."

The fledgling manager expressed hope for the future with the Reds, but he admitted the team left a lot to be desired. "I think we should score more runs," he said. "Maybe we'll break out and get a streak started tonight.

"But we'll make a few deals, too, if they are to the advantage of our team."

Mostly, however, Walters said he hoped to strengthen the team with rookies from the Red farm system.

Georges Carpentier Arrives to Help Cerdan for Zale

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Georges Carpentier, former light-heavyweight champion who fought Jack Dempsey for the world heavyweight title 27 years ago, arrived from France today to see his countryman, Marcel Cerdan, fight Tony Zale for the middleweight crown September 21.

Carpentier supposedly will help train Cerdan in his preparations for the title bout at Jersey City. He indicated, however, that his "coaching" will be confined largely to appearances designed to help ticket sales. He will visit Cerdan's training camp at Lock Sheldrake, N. Y., for the first time on Friday.

Carpentier, tired from the airplane trip from Paris and two sleepless nights, said that he weighed 168 pounds—exactly what he weighed when he fought Dempsey in 1921. At that time his weight was announced as 172 pounds but Georges insisted he was lighter.

Nats Continue Dizzy Desecnt Downward, Bow to A's Twice

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The fast-moving Nats continued their souped-up descent toward the American League cellar last night with consecutive defeats Nos. 7 and 8 after mingling with the Athletics for 5½ hours in a doubleheader.

By twilight, the A's licked 'em, 10-7, and in the strictly nocturnal portion of the program the Nats took a 5-2 beating. The proceedings left 9680 customers quite glum.

A four-run ninth inning by the Nats in the first game merely set the stage for an agonizing climax after they put the tying run on base with one out. With the bases loaded, Mickey Vernon lined a double-play bal linto the eager mitt of First Baseman Ferris Fain.

The Nats unveiled Rookie Dick Weik, longstemmed righthander from Chattanooga, as a starting pitcher in the second game and he issued 10 bases on balls before he was lifted in the sixth inning, trailing 5-2.

Three of the four runs off Weik stemmed from walks. The fourth was quite different. It was a pulssant over-the-wall poke by Elmer Valo.

Carl Scheib, who earns a nice livelihood beating the Nats, beat 'em for the fourth time this season in that second game. He gave up only seven hits and drove in one of the A's runs with a triple.

The A's took a brief 1-0 lead in the second inning against Weik by a display of mere patience. He walked four men. Weik's own single and Kozar's triple to the centerfield corner tied the score for the Nats in the third and in the fourth they went temporarily in front when Vernon scored from third on a double steal with Robertson.

That's the last run the Nats ever did get off Scheib, though Weik did lead off the fifth with a triple t oleft. The A's tied the score at 2-2 in the fifth on Valo's swat, and in the sixth after getting two out, Weik filled the bases with walks before Majeski singled to right for two runs.

In that first game, the starting pitchers weren't around long. Early Wynn was rapped for three runs in the first inning after Joost, McCosky and Fain saluted him with singles and he departed the contest in the second.

Starting Pitcher Alex Kellner of the A's didn't last that long. The Nats got rid of him with a two-dun first inning.

Tom Ferrick took over a 4-2 deficit in the second inning and bravely attempted to keep the Nats in the ball game by pitching two hit ball through the seventh. But the Nats were getting nothing off Charles Harris of the A's for six innings.

The A's came up with an unearned run in the seventh, got another in the eighth and bounced in front 10-3, with a four-run ninth against Earl Harrist.

Then the Nats got obstreperous and pounded Harris, Bob Savege and Dick Fowler for four runs. Fowler pinked Christman with a pitched ball to load the bases with one out and put the tying run on, but Fain went to great lengths, about 5 feet in the air, to pull down Vernon's line drive for a double play.

Shag's Rams Plot Football 'Revolution' Against Hawaii

HONOLULU, Sept. 8 (AP).—Some "revolutionary football ideas" are promised by Clark Shaughnessy's Los Angeles Rams in their second exhibition game with the Hawaiian Warriors Friday night.

George Trafton, Shaughnessy's assistant and a former Chicago Bear tackle, said his boss had been working on some unorthodox gridiron plays for quite a spell.

The visiting professional team from the National League appeared to be playing under wraps against the Warriors Monday, although they easily tromped the Hawaiians 41 to 20.

"IT WAS A David and Goliath situation Monday," said Trafton. "And we're going to take away David's slingshot Friday—if we can."

Shaughnessy is using all his players to get a good line on his talent before cutting the squad to the league limit of 35. The team is working out daily on the Kaneohe Naval Air Station Field.

Bucs Score 4 in 8th, Triumph, 5-1

Cincinnati, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates exploded for four runs in the eighth inning tonight to defeat the Cincinnati Reds 5-1 and strengthen their second-place position in the National League pennant race.

Tiny Bonham set the Reds down on four hits for his fifth victory as against nine defeats. Ted Kluszewski's eleventh homer of the season deprived Bonham of a shutout.

Although he was pounded for seven hits, Starter Howie Fox held the Pirates to one run until the eighth when two walks and Dixie Walker's single loaded the bases.

Nanny Murtaugh's fourth single of the night drove in the tie-breaking run. Eddie Fitzgerald rapped a two-run single. Bonham drove in the final marker with a one-baser.

The Reds got to Bonham for hits in each of the first three innings but he tightened the screws after that and a safe bunt by Frank Baumholtz in the sixth was the only Redleg safety the rest of the way.

The Cubs picked on Ken Johnson early as Emil Verban opened the game with a double. Eddie Waitkus promptly scored him with a single. Chicago picked up another run in the third on two singles and a sacrifice.

Johnson walked himself into trouble in the t p of the ninth putting Hal Jeffcoat, Phil Cavarretta and Clyde McCullough on base that way. Roy Smalley then singled home the winning markers.

33,775 See Boston Up Lead to 2½ In Slugfest

Boston, Sept. 8 (AP).—Undaunted when the Yankees scored four times in the opening inning, Boston's American League leading Red Sox bounced back with five runs of their own in that same session and went on to thump the second-place New Yorkers 10-6 tonight before 33,775 paid fans.

The victory stretched the Sox's advantage over the runnerup Bronx Bombers to 2½ games.

The Sox now have their largest lead of the season in the furious fight for the flag in the American League. Their previous best advantage was a game and a half.

The victory was credited to Earl Jonnson, Boston southpaw who took over the pitching in the seventh with the score knotted 6-6 two out and Yankees on first and second.

Johnson got the side out and gave up only two harmless singles the rest of the way.

Berra Hits 14th Homer

Five lusty singles sandwiched around an error poured four New York runs across the plate in the opening inning and it seemed as if the former men of Joe McCarthy were on their way to a decisive decision over McCarthy's new group of maulers.

The fifth Yankee run was Yogi Berra's fourteenth homer of the season, a long swat into the bull pen in deep right center.

Their sixth score, which eventually caused the derricking of Starter Joe Dobson, was started on its way by Billy Hitchcock's error.

The Sox showed they could come back as they scored four of their five runs in their half of the first after two outs.

Frank Shea Routed

Big blow of the inning was Birdie Tebbetts' towering triple, which the Boston catcher bounced off the wall in centerfield. That wallop scored Wally Moses and Billy Goodman, who had singled. Tebbetts scored the fifth run of the inning on Billy Hitchcock's base hit.

The first two runs were scored by Dom DiMaggio and Johnny Pesky, who greeted Spec Shea, first of five Yankee hurlers, with a single and a double. Dom scored

Bobby Brownell Begins Defense of District Golf Title Today

He Meets Slater in 1st Round

Bobby Brownell goes after his third straight District Amateur Golf championship this morning as first-round match play starts at Columbia Country Club.

Bobby's first-round foe is C. A. Slater. Despite his 76 medal score of last Tuesday, Bobby is the tournament favorite.

Two rounds take place today, with the quarterfinals slated for Friday. The semifinals and finals are scheduled for Saturday.

Buddy Bowie is the leading dark horse. Playing on his home Columbia course last Tuesday, Buddy shot a one-over-par 71 to tie Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase for medal honors.

Col. Paul Clifford is Bowie's first-round opponent. Bogart faces R. M. Cook. If Bowie and Bogart win in the first round, they play each other in the afternoon round.

Brownell, the lean former G-Man, has won the District Amateur title three times. He won first in 1938, and came back to win again in 1946 and 1947.

That he's in fine form was demonstrated two weeks ago when he led the District's qualifiers for the National Amateur tourney. Brownell defeated his first two opponents in the National before being eliminated.

Bosox Rout Yankees, 10-6

as Ted Williams grounded out and Pesky came in on a hit by Moses.

The Sox, who had added one run in the fourth, scored four times in their seventh to make victory certain. These runs were at the expense of Reliefer Lefty Joe Page who pitched to six men and could get only one of them out.

In the Yankee first, Snuffy Stirnweiss, Tommy Henrich, Hank Bauer and Joe DiMaggio singled in succession. Dom DiMaggio booted the ball while fielding Brother Joe's clout into center field allowing one run to score and the Yankee Clipper to go to second.

Bobby Brown's single scored the bigger of the DiMags from third, where he had raced after Berra flied out to right.

In the top of the seventh, Hitchcock fumbled Snuffy Stirnweiss' grounder and the Yankee second baseman reached first safely. Henrich lashed a safety into right field, Stirnweiss legging it to third and scored on Bauer's fly.

After Joe DiMag walloped a scorching grounder which hopped over Johnny Pesky's shoulder into left field for a single, Earl Johnson was called in to pitch. Berra grounded to Goodman, who made a nice stop and retired the side.

After that and their own four-run seventh the Red Sox were in complete control.

Hoyas Have 55 Footballers—Eligible, Ready; Hilltoppers May Be Surprise Team of East

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The usually genial Rome Schwagel, Georgetown's director of athletics, has been morose of late.

"It's this way," he confided to a friend, "Maryland had one ineligible player and that's all I read in the papers. Why, we have 55 eligible players and I can't find a line on them."

Schwagel was so right we went out and looked at the Hoya squad yesterday afternoon.

It's bursting with more than just eligibility. Head Coach Jack Hagerty has 24 lettermen back and if a few of his promising sophomore backs live up to expectations you can look for Georgetown to have the surprise team of the East.

At any rate, it won't take long to know if Georgetown will go through undefeated—and that's not a far-fetched possibility if the team realizes its potentialities.

Just two weeks from Saturday, Georgetown faces the always rugged Holy Cross eleven at Worcester. The following Friday night, Coach Denny Meyers brings in powerful Boston College, making its first invasion of Washington.

JACK HAGERTY
Calmly confident

Right now the New England clubs look like the toughest on the schedule. If the Hoyas get by them, they should go all the way.

Hagerty appears to be quietly confident over this season's prospects, but he wouldn't be a football coach if he wasn't worried.

And yesterday he was concerned about a weighty guard problem—450 pounds worth. Brooklyn's Jim Ricca, 225, and John Berger, Peabody, Mass., who also scales 225, have been disappointing in drills.

"Those guys ought to push anybody out of their way," Hagerty mused, "but they're not doing it." Line Coach Mush Dubofsky, equally concerned, added, "Some big men think all they have to do is step on the field and they have the team made. There's more to this game of football than that.

"I've got smaller boys who are looking better than Ricca and Berger." Dubofsky was referring to Fred Sternberg, 180-pound Bostonian; Jim Nalls, 180-pounder from Gonzaga High, and Art Sheridan, burly soph who's in the 200-pound class.

Hagerty is keenly aware of the vital guard spot because he lost Bus Werder and Elmer Oberto. If Ricca and Berger play the ball they're capable of playing, Georgetown can field a mammoth line averaging 218 pounds. Supplying some of that heft may be Tackle Jim O'Keefe, another Gonzaga product who goes 235. O'Keefe, a junior, has been displaying great promise.

If Hagerty had to make an immediate backfield choice, he'd take Babe Baranowski, Connie O'Doherty, Johnny Hughes and Soph Dick Barba. In order behind them are Soph Billy Conn, Soph Billy Rose, John Preston and a returning vet, Brooke Beyer.

You'll be hearing more about the Hoyas' sassy sophs. Hagerty hopes you'll be hearing about them after the games—not just before.

Two O'Keefes on Squad

Double Trouble for Gonzaga's Football Opponents This Year

FOR THE PAST 10 years the name "O'Keefe" has appeared on the Gonzaga High School football roster, and this year it's mentioned twice.

"O'Keefe" isn't one man, but four brothers who, since 1939, have succeeded one another as stars on the I Street gridiron.

The latest additions are Tommy, 181-pound fullback, and his kid brother, Marty, 185-pound tackle.

Tommy has attended Gonzaga for three years and played varsity ball all three years. But this feat does not outshine the ability of his predecessors, Jim and Johnny O'Keefe, who each won four varsity letters at Gonzaga.

Jim is now playing tackle for Georgetown, and Johnny, after turning down scholarships from Notre Dame, Fordham, Villanova, Wake Forest and others, decided to play end for Holy Cross.

In Tom's first year, he played guard. But last year Coach Joe Kozik thought his talents would be more useful elsewhere and shifted him to fullback, where, together with Halfback Johnny Hogan, he promises to be one of Gonzaga's leading ground gainers.

WHEN A SECOND-STRING lineman was asked who he would rather tackle, O'Keefe or Hogan, he replied, "It's not a question of who I would rather tackle, it's who I can tackle.

"With O'Keefe it's all power, and he runs over me and everybody else like a locomotive. As for Hogan, I think I could bring him down. That is, if I could catch him."

Hogan is a triple-threat. As a passer he's one of the best in the city; as a kicker he averages 40 yards a boot; and as a runner he is among the best Gonzaga has produced.

With Hogan and Quarterback Billy Haley pitching, and veteran ends Mike Nolan and Maurice Murphy catching, Gonzaga's aerial attack should prove effective in its opener at Mount Vernon Friday night.—(JULES LOH).

Phils' Homers Beat Giants

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Andy Seminick's line drive home run into the upper deck with Ralph Caballero on base in the ninth inning gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 5-4 victory over the New York Giants tonight.

Seminick's blow, third Philly four-bagger of the game, snapped a four-game Giant winning streak—all against the Phils—and enabled Walter Dubiel to chalk up his seventh triumph.

Bert Haas drove in the Phils' first two tallies with his fourth homer, which he smashed off Sheldon Jones in the sixth.

After the Giants tied the count in the seventh, Del Ennis connected for his twenty-fifth circuit swat in the eighth but the New Yorkers assumed a short-lived lead in the eighth on Johnny Mize's two-run double.

Barney Welsh Plays Talbert

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—Louise Brough, the husky Beverly Hills, Calif., girl who took charge of American women's tennis when Pauline Betz turned pro, will have the champion's privilege of opening the National Singles Tennis Championships at Forest Hills Friday.

The defending women's champion, Miss Brough will play the opening match on the stadium courts against Charlotte B. Decker of Washington, D. C., at 11:45 a. m. (EST) Friday. Probably she will finish about 45 minutes later and turn over the center courts for a series of men's matches that promise to be far more interesting than the usual run of first-day clashes.

The highest ranked player to take part in the opening day's men's singles program is second-seeded Bill Talbert of New York. He will meet Barney Welsh of Rockville, Md., on the grandstand courts.

Jet Beaten In Tourney, 7-2

Harrisburg, Sept. 8 (AP).—The Jet Motor Sales team of Washington, D. C., ran into some expert pitching today and lost the opener of the All-American Baseball Tournament to Rising Sun, Md.

Bill Bea, ace right-hander of the Rising Sun team, held the Washington sluggers to three scattered hits while his mates pounded out seven hits that were good for the same number of runs.

Longvallee Wins Feature At Timonium

Timonium, Md., Sept. 8.—Longvallee, a V. Cranford gelding, scored his second triumph of the year in today's sixth and feature race to return $24.20 to each of his $2 backers.

Another long-shot popped up in the fifth event, run off before 7123 onlookers. Isle of Man, owned by L. W. Allen romped home in this race and paid of $158.20. However, before being officially declared the winner, he had to withstand a claim of foul on behalf of Orcus, who had held the early lead.

Completing the mile and five furlongs of "good" track in 2:58, Longvallee finished in front of Sticky Fussy by a neck. Exploration, the favorite, took third money.

Longvalle was no worse than second during the whole race. First he dueled with Mr. Flip, then with Exploration, and finally Sticky Fussy.

The first race went to Bugler of Cedar Hill Stable. Bugler, the favorite, coasted in and paid $4.48. G. S. Fockler's Sand Rose, took the second race. The daily double prize was $35.20 for $2.

R. W. FARRELL, Trichologist

Give your scalp a chance to grow hair! Don't let simple deterrents like clogged follicles or sluggish circulation stifle your scalp's natural urge to grow strong, healthy hair! Our intensive trichological treatments scientifically combine ultraviolet therapy, professional stimulation and exclusive laboratory-created formulae; they penetrate clogged hair passages, attack subscalp bacteria, eliminate itchiness and irritation, normalize the blood circulation which "feeds" the hair roots, and revitalizes the entire cycle of hair-growing activity. Delay is deadly and may lead to fatal follicle shrinkage. Come in today or tonight for a free comprehensive examination and consultation. Hopeless cases are never accepted. Yes, enjoy your hair's new virile look within 30 days or we'll pay your fee!

D. C. Opens Drive Against Syphilis

The District Health Department is opening a new battle in its war against venereal disease. It is turning its educational guns on "The Great Masquerader"—syphilis—so-called because its symptoms are often mistaken by victims for minor, superficial troubles.

The disease infected 4313 District residents last year, counting only the reported cases. Health Department records of reported cases show an annual increase here since 1945. They also show that 118 District residents died from syphilis last year, and that it brought paralysis, insanity, blindness or heart disease to many others.

And yet, most cases can now be cured by penicillin in from 5 to 15 days if caught in an early stage, Dr. S. Ross Taggart, head of the Health Department's venereal disease bureau, said at a press conference yesterday.

But, he warned, "penicillin won't cure any of the damages done by the disease in its later development."

In the year-long campaign against gonorrhea, which will continue to be carried on along with the antisyphilis drive, health authorities have been urging those with signs of the disease to obtain treatment from their physicians or from one of the three free clinics run by the District.

Because of the different nature of syphilis, everyone—whether afflicted with known symptoms or not—is being asked in this campaign to have a blood test.

Blood tests may be obtained at Health Department clinics free of charge, and physicians may send blood smears to the department laboratory for free analysis. Treatment for those using Health Department facilities is provided at the clinics and at a rapid treatment center. Information may be obtained by calling Metropolitan 4600.

Wender Bars Hearing on Segregation

Announced plans by the District Progressive Party and the Young Progressive Party to protest segregation on public playgrounds ran into difficulty yesterday.

The groups had announced that representatives would attend the next meeting of the District Recreation Board, but yesterday Harry S. Wender, board chairman, said the board will "not hear any political organization on policy matters."

"We are not taking up the matter," he declared vehemently. "This has been a live question for the past two years and our policy is already determined.

"Our board will not be used as a political football and is not going to be involved in their political shenanigans," Wender said.

The board is scheduled to meet Tuesday at 2:30 p. m.

The Young Progressives have staged two demonstrations on the playground segregation issue in the past two weeks.

Silver Spring Underpass Program Set

Finishing touches were applied yesterday to plans for a gala celebration at Silver Spring Saturday to mark reopening of the million-dollar Georgia ave. underpass.

Highlights of the affair, expected to attract residents from all over Greater Washington, will be a ribbon-cutting ceremony by Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., of Maryland at 2 p. m.

After he cuts the ribbon opening the project to traffic, Governor Lane will ride in the first car to use the underpass. He will be accompanied by Roy B. White, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and Charles H. Kopeland, chairman of the Avenue of Progress committee.

Then a parade, featuring five bands and 42 floats, will start from the underpass. It will proceed up Georgia ave. and disperse at Montgomery Blair High School Stadium, where a two-hour ceremony has been planned, beginning at 4 p. m.

Congressman J. Glenn Beall of Maryland's Sixth District, and Chairman Robert M. Reindollar, of the State Roads Commission, are scheduled to participate.

Divorces, Marriages Decline

The Nation's courts ground out about 25 per cent fewer divorces last year than in 1946, when the all-time peak was hit, according to a report released yesterday by the Public Health Service.

Marriages also declined in 1947, the report revealed, but only about one eighth below the 1946 rate, which was also a record year for weddings.

Over the country, 1,992,354 weddings were performed in 1947, compared to 2,291,045 in the preceding year. Nationally, the 1947 marriage rate per 1000 population was 13.9; it was 16.4 in 1946. The 1947 divorce rate was 3.3; the 1946 rate was 4.3.

While 1947 marriages and divorces both showed declines, they were lower only in comparison to the all-time 1946 highs. Otherwise, last year's marriage rate was the second highest in history, and the divorce rate was the third highest, exceeded only by 1946 and 1945.

Reece, Acuff Greeted With Eggs

Kingsport, Tenn., Sept. 8 (AP).—Eggs, fruit, and vegetables were hurled at candidates Roy Acuff and B. Carroll Reece, Republican National Committeemen, at a political rally here last night.

Acuff, the hillbilly singer and Republican candidate for Governor, was struck by a grapefruit. Reece, who is running for the United States Senate, was hit by an unidentified missile.

Other missiles striking near Reece spattered the suit of the former Republican national chairman.

"One sustained shower of the missiles descended on and about the speakers' platform and the culprits vanished into the crowd," reported Police Chief Charles Still.

William Freehoff, jr., political writer, and photographer Ellis Binkley, both of the Kingsport Times-News, were hit. Binkley's camera was so badly damaged he was unable to take a picture of the incident.

Executor Wins Commission Suit

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday ruled that the executor of an estate is entitled to a commission based on the gross value rather than the net value of the estate.

The ruling, which reversed a District Court decision, held that Cornelius H. Doherty, executor of the estate of the late Mrs. Christina Buchholz, be given a commission based on the value of her estate as it was determined at the time of her death and before deductions for debts and taxes were made.

Arguing the case with Doherty on his behalf were Spencer Gordon and Miss Eleanor Sessoms. Prentice E. Edrington represented the heirs, a niece, Mrs. Louise Stoner; a nephew, Gustav F. Blank, and a step-brother, Fred Merkle.

Mrs. Buchholz, who was owner of the Occidental Restaurant, died January 15, 1945. She left a will entitling Doherty to a 10 per cent commission.

In his accounting as executor, he based the commission in part on real estate, valued at $208,412, and on $44,219 deposited in a bank at the time of Mrs. Buchholz's death.

The heirs, who filed exceptions to Doherty's accountong, charged, however, that his commission should be based only on the amount of cash the real estate property was sold for after deductions amounting to $66,202, were made for a mortgage, taxes, brokers fees and title charges.

The Court of Appeal's ruling increases Doherty's commission by $9000.

Court Hearing On Woodlawn Set Sept. 21

Hearing on a petition from a group that seeks to turn historic Woodlawn, near Mount Vernon, into a public shrine will be held September 21 in the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

The petition, filed by Woodlawn Public Foundation, Inc., asks that the effective date of a court order authorizing the sale of the 126-acre estate to a Catholic mission society be stayed until December 31. It asks further that the foundation be peremitted to submit a bid of its own before that date.

The court last month authorized the Immaculata Heart of Mary Mission Society, Inc., to purchase the estate for $165,000 from guardians for the estate of the owner, Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood.

John A. K. Donovan, attorney for the mission society, reiterated in a reply to the petition that his clients would be willing to step aside if the foundation could make an offer "substantially in excess" of that made by the society.

The foundation indicated in its petition that he has raised only part of the necessary amount, but hoped to raise the rest from contributions before the end of the year.

Maj. Gen. Howard Reports Here for New Marine Duty

Maj. Gen. Samuel L. Howard, who commanded the Fourth Marine Regiment at Bataan and Corregidor, has reported for duty at Marine Corps headquarters here.

Gen. Howard

Howard, a native of Washington, has been in command of Marine garrison forces in the Pacific until recently. His new assignment has not yet been announced. The 57-year-old Marine general was in command of the Fourth Marines in Shanghai, just before Pearl Harbor, and was moved to the Philippines.

Son of the late Clement W. Howard, Washington insurance man, General Howard attended Virginia Military Institute and entered the Marines in 1914. He won the Navy Cross at Pearl Harbor for his action on Bataan and Corregidor, and was a Japanese prisoner of war until 1945.

Tonnage Limit Bars School Bus Use of New Span

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 8 (AP).—Three school busses will take the long way round when classes begin tomorrow for some 16,600 Anne Arundel County pupils.

Drivers of the 8½-ton vehicles have been ordered not to cross South River on a newly widened Riva Road Bridge, Superintendent David S. Jenkins said today.

Strengthened this year to give the buses a short route from Davidsonville to Annapolis, the bridge has been found to have an 8-ton limit, he said.

About 200 pupils from the Davidsonville area south of here will be driven several miles around to the main South River Bridge downstream, Jenkins said.

Driver Found And Cleared In Death of Year-Old Girl

Car Is Located On Slim Evidence in Same Neighborhood As Fatal Accident

Persevering police work late Tuesday night located the driver of the car that killed a 13-month-old child, but Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday decided the motorist was not to blame.

The small victim was Jeanette Clement, only child of David L. and Nadine A. Clement of 1329 Belmont st. nw.

She was crushed to death beneath the right rear wheel of an automobile in front of her home Tuesday. The driver, apparently unaware of the tragedy, drove on.

Police later identified the driver as Benjamin Robinson, 57, of 1104 Monroe st. nw. Robinson is well known as a ticket seller at local sports events.

No Inquest Planned

After an autopsy at the morgue yesterday, Dr. MacDonald announced there would be no inquest and that he would issue a certificate of accidental death.

Robinson was found through painstaking work by Pvt. Horace W. Carmichael, a motorcycle policeman attached to the Accident Investigation Unit and assigned to hit-and-run cases.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz starts on Page One today.

Carmichael obtained a partial description of the car from a witness, Miss Lucy J. Hunt, of 1330 Belmont st. nw., a teacher at Hine Junior High School. She said the car was black and that its license tags ended with numbers "99."

From the circumstances of the case, Carmichael decided the driver must have been looking for a parking place, hence was probably a resident of the neighborhood.

Hilda Patricia

He drove through the neighborhood examining every black car with likely license tags, checking under the right rear wheels for evidence. As darkness wore on, he used his flashlight.

Finds Car Near Scene

Finally, he found the car. It was about a block and a half from the scene of the accident. Beneath the right rear wheel were strands of fine hair, tangled in a spring.

The rest was routine. The tag numbers were checked, the name of the owner obtained. Carmichael learned the man was visiting friends in the neighborhood.

When he informed Robinson that his car had killed a child, the man was stunned.

"He told me," said Carmichael, "that he knew most of the children in the neighborhood, and probably had talked to the little girl who was killed."

Funeral services for the child will be held at 10:30 a. m. Saturday at the Chambers funeral home, 14th and Chapin sts. nw. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Jeep Rider Killed

Meanwhile, a traffic accident at about 11:45 a. m. yesterday on Route 1 near Triangle, Va., about 30 miles south of Alexandria, claimed the life of Charles Grate, 28, of Richmond. State police said Grate was killed instantly when a jeep in which he was riding struck a bridge abutment.

Two persons were injured in the same accident. William E. Goode, 24, of Petersburg, Va., and W. Austin, 24, of Linden, N. C., were taken to the Marine Hospital at Quantico. Goode suffered a broken jaw and facial cuts. Austin was treated for lacerated face and left shoulder and released.

State police said it had not been determined who was driving the jeep.

The wife, daughter and sister-in-law of Zohar R. del Campo, counsellor at the Argentine Embassy, suffered minor cuts and bruises at 2 p. m. yesterday when their car struck a tree at Connecticut ave. and Irving st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Montgomery County police said five persons were in the car, driven by Mrs. Lydia del Campo, 32, wife of the counsellor, when the steering rod came loose and the car swerved into a tree.

Mrs. del Campo, her daughter, Martha, 6, and the sister-in-law, Mrs. Esther del Campo, 26, all of 9725 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase, were treated at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda.

Loeally, three children and an 88-year-old woman were injured in traffic accidents.

Bike Riders Hurt

The aged woman was Mrs. Frances Clore, of 726 Kastle pl. ne., who was struck down by a truck at about 11:30 a. m. while crossing Benning rd. ne., near 24th st. She was reported in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital. Her injuries included a fractured right arm and shock.

Police identified the driver of the truck as James Washington, 44, of 1839 Stanton terr. se.

Patricia Louise Ogletree, 10, and her sister, Hilda Ann, 4, were injured when the bicycle on which they were riding was in collision with an automobile at about 11:30 a. m. at 4th st. and North Carolina ave. se.

Police said Dr. James M. Fadeley, 52, of 1698 32d st. nw., driver of the car, took Patricia to Providence Hospital where she was admitted for observation. The younger child, who was riding on the handlebars, was taken to the hospital by her father, Hillman Ogletree, and released after two stitches were taken in her scalp.

Lee H. Wilson, 10, of 4105 Legation st. nw., was hurt when his wagon ran into an auto at 1140 a. m. in the 4100 block of Military rd. nw.

The boy was taken to Walter Reed Hospital where it was reported he suffered bruises to the left shoulder, arm and back, a possible fracture of the left arm and foot injuries.

FROM PALETTE TO PELLETS—Lieut. Shula Friedberg, 24, is an Israeli heroine of the Palestine war

By John London
Post Reporter

A pert brunette from embattled Israel yesterday explained why she had traded an artist's palette and brush for a Sten gun and first-aid kit:

"It's our first fight in 2000 years—it's about the time we stopped being the underdog."

Shapely, tanned Lieut. Shula Friedberg is an Israeli war hero at 24—she has killed at least 10 Arabs.

Lieutenant Friedberg arrived yesterday at the Israel Mission, 2210 Massachusetts ave. nw., with four women and four male soldiers of the new state. They will tour some 20 American cities in connection with the 250-million-dollar United Jewish Appeal.

Like the others, Shula was young, 14, when she joined Haganah, underground army which formed the core of the present defense army of Israel.

"First I carried messages, operated illegal communication lines, posted anti-British placards," she recalled. "At 17 I was trained in small arms and field craft."

Then came assignments to missions: attacking hostile Arab settlements, defending Jewish communities, blowing up Arab convoys.

"Ten boys and I were detailed to blow up an Arab convoy on the Haifa-Lebanon road last spring," she said. "We thought the truck carried small arms. It turned out to be dynamited."

Shula's house, half a kilometer away, was shaken—and two Israeli soldiers were killed by the blast.

Now her duties keep her just behind the front. Because of "the way Arabs treat women prisoners," Israeli women soldiers have been relieved of combat duty.

Three-weeks Old

Baby Girl Abandoned At Station

An abandoned baby girl, estimated to be three weeks old, was found yesterday in a toilet booth at Union Station by a maid who heard the infant's cries.

The child, taken to Gallinger Hospital, was neatly dressed in a white wrap-around kimona, a flannelette robe, a white yarn cap and bootees.

Police said they had not located the mother late last night. The child was found by Mary Thompson, 48, of 1425 5th st. nw., who said she was cleaning up in the rest room when she head the baby crying in a nearby booth.

The child was further described as white, with dark hair and was wearing white clothing.

Sleeping Pills Send Children to Hospital

A 13-year-old girl and her 10-year-old brother were taken to Providence Hospital yesterday, unconscious from an accidental overdose of sleeping tablets.

An aunt of the two children, Howard and Dolores Dye, 1004 North Carolina ave. se., told police the pills were supposed to have been vitamins.

Both children were admitted to the hospital, where their condition was described as good. No report was available from police as to how the accident was caused.

Insurance Men In Safety Drive

The 156 members of the District agency force of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., will canvass the city today as part of a national campaign to cut the accident rate among youngsters.

The drive locally is part of a Nationwide movement which opened Labor Day sponsored by the United States Children's Bureau, the American Academy of Pediatrics, and the National Safety Council.

Draft Centers Register 515 Born in '26 as 2d Half Starts

A total of 515 men born in 1926 trooped to the four city-wide registration centers yesterday as the District draft machinery moved smoothly into the last half of the signing-up period.

Registration of men born in 1926 will be concluded today, with men born in 1927 scheduled to sign up Friday and Saturday.

Since the city's 25-year-olds opened registration August 30, some 31,050 men have signed up at more than 200 centers here, Frank D. Norton, deputy draft director, reported yesterday. He predicted registrars would handle 50,000 men by the time the period ends September 18.

Draft-eligible men may register at the city-wide centers—the District Building, Municipal Center, National Guard Armory and Dunbar High School—and at any of the following centers:

The city's 34 firehouses, police precinct stations 6, 8, 9, 11 and 13, and American University's student center, Nebraska and Massachusetts ave. nw., and School of Public Affairs, 19th and F sts. nw. Federal agencies and many private businesses are also conducting registration for their employes.

7 New Polio Cases Found In D. C. Area

Three 3-Year-Olds Stricken; Total For Year Is 127, Greater Than 1947

Seven new polio cases, including three 3-year-olds, were reported in Greater Washington yesterday, raising the year's total to 127, as compared with 20 for this time last year.

The 3-year-olds included one from the first block of Barnacle gr. sw., who entered Children's Hospital August 31; another from the first block of U st. nw., who was admitted to Children's Tuesday and a third from the 1200 block of North Nash st., Arlington, who entered Children's Sunday.

The other cases were a 15-year-old boy from the 1800 block of 6th st. nw., who entered Gallinger Hospital Tuesday; a girl, 8, of the 200 block of 33d st. nw., who entered Children's Thursday; a boy, 7, of the 300 block of 50th st. ne., who entered Gallinger Tuesday, and a 4-year-old girl of the 5100 block of North 26th st., Arlington, who entered Children's Tuesday.

The new cases raised the District total for the year to 70 and for nearby Maryland and Virginia counties to 57.

Throughout Virginia, the disease continued to mount as four new cases, one a fatality, were reported to the State Health Department. The fatality was in Patrick County and the new cases in Cumberland and Smyth Counties and Norfolk. The State's polio death toll for the year is now 15.

Nurse Shortage Hits Gallinger Polio Ward

The long-standing general shortage of nurses hit Gallinger Hospital's polio ward yesterday when, for the first time, its usual registry source for nurses was unable to fill a vacancy.

Newspapers and radio stations were asked by Miss Sarah Wilson, executive secretary of the D. C. Chapter, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, to broadcast an appeal for qualified nurses to notify Gallinger or the chapter of their availability. The chapter pays their salaries.

Ban Is Asked On Parking Along F St.

CTC Suggests Move To Speed Buses for Fringe Shuttle Plan

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday began consideration of a proposal by the Capital Transit Co. for elimination of all parking on F st. nw. between 8th and 15th sts. to expedite a fringe-parking shuttle bus plan.

No parking is allowed at present on the south side of F st. between 13th and 14th sts., which is a theater district. Also, no parking is allowed on the north side of F st. between 10th and 11 th sts.

Elsewhere between 8th and 15th sts. parking is regulated by meters, although spaces are limited, especially in the 1100 and 1200 blocks of F st.

E. D. Merrill, CTC president, in his request to the PUC, said sufficient room was required for buses to reach the curb at bus stops and that vehicle parking "would seem to create a hazard and obstruction out of proportion to the benefits."

Elimination of F st. parking would require public hearings and final consideration by the Dstrict Commissioners. Acting Director of Vehicles and Traffic Wallace Braun yesterday declared he could see no reason for halting such parking.

The present proposal for fringe parking lots includes tracts at 3d st. and Constitution ave. nw. and at 25th and E sts. nw. An earlier plan to include the Temple Heights area at 19th st. and Florida ave. nw. has been temporarily sidetracked.

The CTC request asks PUC to authorize a six-month experimental period starting September 20 for the shuttle bus service.

Lands in Jail

New Father Overdoes His Celebrating

Birth of a 7-pound 5½-ounce baby girl yesterday morning at George Washington University Hospital resulted in a disturbance that snarled rush-hour traffic for nearly 15 minutes around 5 p. m. on Rock Creek Parkway under Massachusetts ave. bridge.

Motorcycle Pvt. Frank E. Papuga of the Park Police blamed it on too much celebrating by the baby's father, Eugene R. Jacobsen, 26, Kennedy-Warren Apartments, 3133 Connecticut ave. nw., secretary of the Sterling Laundry, 1021 27th st. nw.

Papuga said Jacobsen started the traffic tieup by trying to turn south into a one-way, north-bound homeward flow of automobiles. The policeman said Jacobsen took a swing at him, wrestled, calmed down, promised to behave, started back into his car, changed his mind, seized the policeman and kicked him in the groin.

By then, traffic was really tangled. Three occupants of one stalled car, James Place, Robert Hasten and Walter White, of the Army's Criminal Intvestigation Division, went to the policeman's aid and Jacobsen was jailed on charges of drunken driving and assaulting an officer.

His wife, Suzanne, and the baby were reported doing nicely.

Former Welfare Worker Sentenced For Hitting Boy

A former social welfare worker yesterday was sentenced in Municipal Court to a $100 fine or 30 days in jail for striking a 14-year-old boy.

The defendant was Harry A. Cohen, 40, operator of a delicatessen at 3499 Holmead pl. nw., who said he had formerly done welfare work with juvenile delinquents in New York City for 14 years.

He was charged with striking Eddie Henshaw of 1353 Otis pl. nw., while the boy was in his store August 23. The boy said Cohen instructed him to tell a buddy not to call Cohen names behind his back and that Cohen hit him while showing what he would do to the buddy.

Farmer Held Without Bond In Auto Rape

N. C. Man Waives Preliminary Hearing At Court Appearance

A frightened young North Carolina farmer was led into Municipal Court yesterday for arraignment on a charge of rape.

The court appearance of Elvid H. Parrell, 26, of Bear Creek, N. C., was brief. Through a court-appointed attorney, he waived preliminary hearing and was ordered held without bond for action of the grand jury.

Police say Parrell is the man who early Tuesday morning forced the 31-year-old wife of a park policeman into his car one door from her home, drove her to a secluded spot and draped her.

They said Parrell admitted the attack after his arrest Tuesday afternoon.

Although Parrell is a slightly built man, weighing no more than 120 pounds and only about 5 feet 4 inches tall, he was flanked by six deputy United States marshals and bailiffs when he appeared in court.

Parrell appeared without counsel, so Judge Aubrey E. Fennell appointed Michael Colbert, 71-year-old attorney who has practiced law in Washington for 50 years, to represent him.

Colbert later told reporters Parrell had told him:

"I don't know why I did it, but I did it. I must have been crazy. I never saw or heard of her before."

Victim Not in Courtroom

There was a brief recess at the beginning of the arraignment during which the park policeman husband of the rape victim and Assistant United States Attorney Harold Bacon met with Judge Fennell in his chambers.

Before the conference, the husband surrendered his blackjack to a deputy marshal.

However, neither the husband nor his wife appeared in the courtroom during the arraignment.

The wife, a tiny woman, 5 feet tall and weighing only 110 pounds, sat in a waiting room. Clearly visible were the lacerations on her upper lip and a swollen red bruise above her left eye, injuries inflicted by the rapist when he beat her with his fists.

Police said a check with the FBI yesterday indicated Parrell had no previous criminal record. Parrell, who served in the Army for three months during the war until discharged because of an agricultural priority, is married, has two children and owns a 160-acre farm in North Carolina.

Last night Parrell's wife was reported en route here from their North Carolina farm.

N.Y. Divorcee Is Arrested At Hotel on Check Charge

Mother of Six Accused of Using Prominent Names To Cash Them

A former Bethesda, Md., divorcee, who listed New York's fashionable Park ave. as her present address, yesterday was charged with passing a $25 check under false pretenses.

The woman gave her name as Isabel Marion Lebling and said she is the mother of six children. Police said she listed her home address as 675 Park ave., New York City.

She was arrested yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel, where she registered at 9:30 a. m., August 31.

Police said they had collected five other checks of $25 each also allegedly signed by the woman, who used the names of prominent Washingtonians in cashing them at various local banks.

Clerk Complains

The complaint which led to the woman's arrest was made by James S. Brogan, a clerk at the Union Trust Co., after she had cashed a $25 check on August 26. It was signed "Mrs. John H. Guider," police reported.

The only person listed in Washington directories by that last name is Mrs. John W. Guider, who has been out of town and could not be reached. The name used on another check which police said she attempted to pass is Mrs. Dorothy Hogan Guider. A friend of the Guider family said that the name Dorothy Hogan was Mrs. Guider's name before her marriage.

Police were holding checks allegedly signed by Mrs. Lebling using the name of Mrs. P. J. Nee, jr., and Miss Margaret F. Reilly. Both Mrs. Nee and Miss Reilly denied having ever known the woman or having heard of her maiden or married name.

Arrested at Hotel

Investigation showed that Mrs. Lebling's maiden name was Horan, and that she is the sister of a medical director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York. Another brother is an assistant corporation counsel in New York City. He said last night he had not seen his sister in more than a year. He said he understood she was living in Philadelphia.

Police said Mrs. Lebling was arrested at the hotel after she had attempted to cash a $50 check at the Hamilton Trust Co. last Friday.

The woman's former husband, a Bethesda real estate man from whom she was divorced at Rockville, Md., in 1946, said he had had "absolutely no connection with her" since their divorce, except to send her alimony checks monthly.

The Leblings had been married 20 years. There are five sons and a daughter, three of whom live with their father in Poolesville, Md.

$10 'Master Cell' Isn't Worth It, Tests Here Show

Preliminary tests on Farmer John Brown's "master cell" said to be a remedy for a multitude of human and animal ailments, have proved negative, George P. Larrick, an executive of the Pure Food and Drug Administration said yesterday.

The findings have been sent to the agency's Boston field office for possible legal action against the Middleboro, Mass., farmer and former druggist who had been selling the "miraculous" cement discs for $10 apiece.

Court records show Brown was fined in 1938 and 1939 for practicing medicine illegally in the sale of a cancer "cure" and "atom-powered" nose drops.

Studies at Library

Charles R. Boxer, professor of Portuguese, University of London, and more recently of Michigan University's Japanese studies center, has begun two months as consultant in Portuguese studies at the Library of Congress. He will analyze the library's collections relating to the history of Portugal in the Far East.

D. C. Library Funds Deemed 'Inadequate' by Association

Funds granted to the District Public Library in the 1949 budget permit only "inadequate service," according to American Library Association standards.

In its annual report, the District Public Library states that the 1949 budget amounts to $1.40 expenditure per capita—whereas $1.50 is the minimum for "limited but inadequate service," by association standards.

ALA rates $2.25 per capita as the minimum for reasonable good service and $3 per capita for "high quality service."

The report also points out a shortage of library school graduates. The increased number of overseas Government library positions and the failure of District employes to get the $330 salary increase granted Federal employes aggravate the shortage of librarians, the report says.

A plan prepared by the library trustees for the "irreducible minimum" of branch agencies calls for a new main library and construction of additional branches in nine sections of the city—Cleveland Park, Tenley, Brightwood, Brookland, Woodridge, Benning, Anacostia, Congress Heights and downtown.

This plan, submitted to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, envisions each branch as a regional library with its own network of "satellite" agencies in schools, Government buildings, and so on.

Site and plan money have been appropriated to date only for Cleveland Park, Benning, Anacostia, Brightwood and Woodridge sections, the report adds.

During the past fiscal year, the report states, 2,718,067 books were circulated—an average of more than three books per District resident. Favorite subjects were books about foreign lands, homes and household management, jobs and teaching.

Some 53,255 additional persons registered at the public libraries, bringing registrations up to 165,074.

Truman Aide's Daughter, 16, Chosen Queen of Cup Regatta

The queen of the seventeenth President's Cup Regatta is the youngest—and perhaps the prettiest—lass ever to grace the annual event.

She is 16-year-old Margery—"Gery" for short—Pepperell Clifford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford, of 5900 Connecticut ave. nw. Clifford is special counsel to President Truman.

Margery is a senior at Woodrow Wilson High School.

When she graduates next year, she hopes to go on to the Julliard Foundation in New York, and eventually into music as a career. The Regatta Queen of 1948 has the voice of a dramatic soprano, which may explain her great interest in and enjoyment of opera and concert symphonies. She gets a bang out of riding, and swimming.

Born in Boston, "Gery" spent the first 11 years of her life in St. Louis, where her father was for a time public defender in local courts. When Clifford went into the Navy and was sent to San Francisco, "Gery," her mother, the former Margery Pepperell Kimball, and her two sisters, Joyce and Randall, went to Boston and lived with the Kimball grandparents. They have lived in Washington for more than three years.

The queenly measurements for 1948: height, 5 ft.-10½; weight, 140 pounds; 27-inch waist, 36½-inch hips. The Regatta Queen has clear blue eyes and the blondest of blonde hair.

Area News in Brief

Transfer of Liquor Store Is Opposed

The proposed transfer of a retail liquor store from its present location in Northwest Washington to 5004 Benning rd. se., yesterday drew the fire of more than a dozen persons at a day-long Alcoholic Beverage Control Board hearing.

Mrs. Freda Ezersky, store operator who wants to move from 3301 Connecticut ave. nw., to the Benning rd. address, told the board she obtained the names of 220 persons in consent to the transfer.

Among those who opposed the move was Police Capt. William T. Murphy, commanding officer of the Fourteenth Precinct. He predicted a "police problem" would arise if another liquor store moved into the area. What the neighborhood needs, Captain Murphy contended, is "other types of stores, such as drug stores."

Mrs. Edna Moser, 4611 Hanna pl. se., vice president of Davis School P-TA, objected that a liquor store might bring questionable persons into the neighborhood. She said the proposed store would be only two blocks from the school.

The Bradbury Heights Citizens' Association was represented by its president, Henry Austin, 909 Ridge rd. se., who also told the board that other types of stores are needed in the area.

The board took the proposed transfer under advisement.

Police to Fight Sneezes

Special attention must be given, they were told in a memorandum from Assistant Superintendent Floyd Truscott, to citizens' complaints about weeds, stagnant water, uncovered garbage receptacles and untidy yards—and especially weeds that add to the torture of hay fever sufferers. Policemen must follow through on all such complaints until the unhealthy conditions are corrected, Truscott ordered.

Baby Smothered

Accidental smothering caused the death of 3-month-old Stanley Lee, 611 H st. ne., an autopsy by Coroner A. Magruder McDonald established yesterday. The child, a twin, was found unconscious in its crib Tuesday night in the home of Mrs. Edith Ping, 1361 C st. ne., who was caring for the twins while their mother, Mrs. Henry Lee, recently arived from China, was taking an English lesson.

Aid Checks Delayed

Public assistance checks totaling about $10,000 for 200 families have been delayed this month, the District Public Welfare Department disclosed yesterday.

Most of the checks are for aid to independent children and were scheduled for mailing September 2 and 3, it was reported. Delivery is now expected by this weekend. One reason for the delay was the necessity for executing new forms on the assistance cases as a result of the raising of Federal grants enacted by the last session of Congress. Another reason given was a personnel vacancy in the check-writing section, which has now been filled.

Belt Makes Police Shine

A luminous "double Sam Browne" belt designed to make policemen on night traffic more visible was tried out yesterday at 14th and F sts. nw.

Long used in Paris, Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires and elsewhere, it was worn by Pvt. Rudyard Y. Hesse, 16 years at that corner, whose verdict after the first of three nights' trial was:

"The white-bordered, luminous strips criss-crossing the chest and back worn over a blue uniform will help a lot in bad winter weather when ice or snow coats automobile windshields.

Testudo Gone Again

Testudo, Maryland University's peripatetic terrapin, is gone again.

The 400-pound bronze shellback who turns up missing at least once every season, somehow was enticed from his perch on a rock in front of the university's coliseum early yesterday morning.

Campus police, as usual, are investigating. University authorities, as usual, are unperturbed.

Auto Sale Is Dud

There were no takers yesterday at a sale of the bomb-blasted auto in which Arlington businessman William A. Denekas was killed.

So the Liberty Loan Corp. of Virginia, which took title to the nearly-wrecked auto after Denekas failed to meet payments on a loan, said it would sell the 1941 Nash to Washington junk dealer John Reece, who earlier had offered $75 for it. The sale was conducted at 11 a. m. at the Arlington Property Yard, 29th st. and S. Seminary rd., Arlington. Denekas was slain June 7 when a bomb in his car exploded as he turned the ignition key. Police still are searching for the slayer.

6 Squirrels Cost $54.70

Six squirrels shot out of season on a Labor Day weekend hunting expedition cost John H. Cubbage of Hyattsville, Md., $24 each, plus $54.70 for hunting without a license and carrying a loaded firearm in his pickup truck.

Jefferson County (W. V.) conservation officers told Peace Justice Dan Walker at Charles Town yesterday they followed Cubbage's trail for three days before arresting him near Ripon, W. Va. They said they found the dressed squirrels in an iced container in the truck.

Curate Recovering From Attack By Hitchhiker

A 33-year-old curate of St. Anthony's Church, 3412 12th st. ne., yesterday was recovering from injuries he suffered when he was attacked by an unidentified hitchhiker Tuesday night on his way to Baltimore.

He is Father John J. Dressell, who left Washington to visit his mother in Baltimore, and picked up a teen-age hitch-hiker at the east of the Baltimore downtown section.

The boy, whom Father Dressell described as about 18, hit the priest over the head and injured his ear when Father Dressell refused to give him money. At Mercy Hospital in Baltimore, 20 stitches were required to close a gash in Father Dressell's head.

Police said Hughes told them he did not know how it happened.

Woman Accused Of Police Assault Is Fined as Drunk

She is Miss Diana Martin of 456 N st. sw., who was released under $200 bond pending her appeal of the decision handed down by Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon.

"This woman was very ladylike on the stand, but it is evident from her mannerisms and actions that she is argumentative. I have no doubt she was drunk and disorderly when the officers tried to help her," Judge McMahon declared.

Two policemen, Pvts. Edwin L. York and R. J. Wrenn of the Eighth Precinct, told the court they stopped to help Miss Martin and her friend, Joseph Morin of 456 N st. sw., when the bumper of Morin's car became entangled with the fender of a parked car August 29.

Donald Duck's Visit Delights Children in District Hospitals

The Washington Post

HOSPITAL VISITOR—Donald Duck (and his voice, Clarence Nash) meets Margery McMahon, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. McMahon of 811 Heron dr., Silver Spring, Md. Donald yesterday visited Children's Hospital, where Margery is a patient

"Don't cry, you're going to be all right."

Thus quacked Donald Duck to a little girl in the surgical ward at Children's Hospital. The little girl is recovering from poliomyletis, and must lie for long intervals with her feet in slings, to straighten her legs.

Donald Duck and his voice, Clarence Nash, made a tour of most of the children's wards in the hospital yesterday. Nash blew into town from Hollywood in connection with the opening of a Walt Disney shop at The Hecht Co., and paid surprise visits yesterday to Children's Hospital, the Police Boys Club and to the District Central Public Library, where he read a Donald Duck story in the voice of Donald Duck.

Nash brought a small replica of Donald Duck with him, and it was this imp that was the delight of the Children's Hospital patients yesterday.

Donald asked one of the little girls for a kiss, and got the quick retort:

"I don't want to kiss a duck!"

Miss Kansas Wins First Test

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP).—A curvaceous brunette from Kansas won in the bathing suit division of the Miss America pageant tonight.

Miss Ralston said if she should win one of the scholarships being offered as prizes in the pageant, she "would apply it to my education in voice and music training."

She will appear in an evening gown preliminary tomorrow night and on Friday will give a three-minute talk on her choice of a career.

It was the opening night of judging for the 55 lovely girls entered for the title of Miss America of 1948.

Some 10,000 spectators watched the show in the huge convention hall. The girls from 43 states, nine cities, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Canada are seeking $25,000 in scholarships.

To Honor Hearsts

Hollywood Stars Glitter Under a Sapphire Tent, Eating Emerald Oranges

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8.—One of Hollywood's most fabulous parties was the dinner dance which was staged on a blue floodlit terrace and under a sapphire blue tent with plastic sides. It was given in honor of the new Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, jr., the former Bootsie Cassini of Washington, by several of the Hearst brothers, Pete McNamara and Mike Romanoff (nee Harry Gerguson) who is the proprietor of Hollywood's most elegant restaurant. The setting was a palatial house owned but never lived in by Mr. Hearst, sr., and used as a sort of spare for entertaining.

After every imaginable variety of cocktail and hors d'oeuvres the guests were seated at big tables under the tent which spread wide enough to cover both dance floor, orchestra, and magnificent buffet. Each table was centered with a jumbo candle surrounded with gardenias and red roses.

The buffet had all the expected delicacies with an exciting fillip as finale. Each guest was served an orange, but what an orange! It was hollowed out, filled with delicious ice cream and nestled in one of those double bowls filled with ice. But like the orange, the ice was unusual. It was tinted emerald green and evidently sprinkled with dry ice, as the dish arrived at the table wreathed in pearly white smoke.

Top Flight Audience

AMONG the hundred plus guests were top magnitude stars, directors, agents, mogul managers of the great movie companies, and those indispensable, indefatigable ladies of the press, Columnists Hedda Hopper, Louella Parsons and Newcomer Cobina Wright, whose first columnar effort debuted Tuesday in the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner.

Wearing the most jewelry was tiny cute Sonia Henie who strung no less than three diamond necklaces around her slim throat, weighted her wrists and fingers with a glittering array of diamonds and emeralds. Joan Crawford, who is taller than one expects, and her newly short bobbed hair, colored the strawberry tint which photographs best, had on a strapless white tulle inset with beads of black lace and a magnificent gob of diamonds clipped to a diamond choker. Miss C dances divinely.

Cutting the best rug was Joan Bennett in silver sequined white tulle and William Haines, the movie colony's most successful decorator, an entertaining gent who confided to this department he had started his career by winning a baby beauty contest.

The extra men included Harpo Marx, whom only the initiated would distinguish minus his trademark wig. Short, pallid, he's as whimsical without cameras as with.

One of the Prettiest

BOB HOPE'S wife, Dolores, is one of the prettiest women in miles. She has a fine-cut profile, soft fluffy dark hair, wears simple clothes. That night her only ornament was a small diamond cross swung on a platinum chain.

Though the music was wonderful, the champagne superlative, no one downed even a bubble too much, and everyone went home at an incredibly early hour. Despite flamboyant publicity attendant on every Hollywood divorce or other marital accident, the upper crust of moviedom is staider than those with similar opportunities for freedom in other American cities.

Miss Darby Becomes Bride Of R. D. Hurley

Miss Margaret Louise Darby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Darby of Washington, was married yesterday morning to Raymond Dominic Hurley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Hurley, also of Washington. The Rev. John J. Darby performed the ceremony at Sacred Heart Church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was costumed in candlelight satin with a pearl coronet holding her veil. She carried baby orchids and lilies of the valley. The bride was attended by Mrs. Robert W. Cayle, matron of honor; Miss Joan Darby, maid of honor, and Mrs. John J. Beatty 3d, Mrs. Murray Toomey, Miss Dorothy Ward, Miss Jane Ellen Dexter, Miss Marianne Darby and Miss Regina Hurley, bridesmaids.

John Joseph Beatty 3d was best man and the ushers were Richard Donovan, Edwin Stohlman, Richard Giebel, John Slattery, J. Dent Farr, J. Rush Shanahan and Chase Fielding.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. After a motor trip through New England Mr. and Mrs. Hurley will be at home in Washington. Mrs. Hurley attended Georgetown Visitation Convent and the College of William and Mary. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma. Her husband studied at Georgetown University and Duke University and is attending Georgetown Law School.

Robert K. Townsend, an uncle of the bride, gave her in marriage. Mrs. Richard L. Hoddinott was matron of honor and Miss Mary Louise Owen was bridesmaid. Miss Wortman, Alan Sahm Wed

The marriage of Miss Anne Lee Wortman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wortman of Washington, to Alan Sahm, son of Mrs. William Sahm and the late Mr. Sahm, took place last evening at Hotel 2400. Rabbi Hugo Schiff officiated.

Dewey-Warren Club Is Host

G. O. P. Campaign Leaders Feted

By Peggy Preston

IT WAS a "Republican landslide" at the Washington Club yesterday.

Maybe there was a Democrat (or a Dixiecrat) lurking in the throng of 300 who turned out for the GOP's "get-acquainted" party, but if so he didn't have a sympathetic soul to talk to. Hosts were members of Washington's new Dewey-Warren Club. Honor guests were bigwigs of the National Republican Committee and members of the local committee. Guests, almost exclusively, were Capitalites who are actively particingpating in the campaign to ticipating in the campaign to put Mr. Dewey in the White

Meeting the Chairman

Biggest attraction at the late afternoon affair was Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., new chairman of the National Republican Committee, who was meeting most of the local volunteer workers for the first time. But Mr. Scott had competition in a long list of fellow, honor guests.

There was, for instance, tall, handsome Mrs. Charles W. Weis, jr., of Rochester, N. Y., who is Associate National Campaign Manager.

Campaign Manager Herbert Brownell, jr., was in New York yesterday, but his department was ably represented by Mrs. Weis. She pointed out that for the first time in history a woman has been named as an "associate" campaign manager, instead of the customary "assistant."

"Chalk up another 'first' for the ladies," said Mrs. Weis between handshakes.

Then there was pretty blond Mrs. Robert W. McCauley, who has the imposing title of vice chairman of the National Committee. J. Russel Sprague, New York national committeeman, was in the receiving line, as were Lewis T. Breuninger, president of the local Dewey-Warren Club, and Mrs. Breuninger; Mrs. Thad Brown, national committeewoman from the District of Columbia; Clyde D. Garrett, national committeeman, and Mrs. Garrett; and Mrs. A. Burks Summers, vice president of the Dewey-Warren Club.

Other officials reeciving included Mr. and Mrs. Warren L. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Wilkes, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. McGarraghy, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Hart, jr., and Mrs. Henry C. Stehl.

GOP Emblems

Before the party was long under way almost everyone had donned a GOP emblem, plucked from a large bowl at the entrance to the reception room. There were big round sticks, reading "All 48 in '48," and enthusiastic guests pinned them on lapels with the smaller, regulation "Dewey-Warren" buttons.

Representative Scott prefered a tiny ivory elephant lapel button and a few other guests clung to old Republican symbols which they had saved from one campaign year to another. But an unadorned suit lapel definitely went out of style yesterday.

Age was no barrier on yesterday's guest list. The one present who claimed the longest period of service to her party was Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, who says she has been interested in Republican campaigns since the one which resulted in the election of President Rutherford Hayes—when she was 10 years old.

"And I have a double reason to work in this one," she remarked from her sideline seat where she watched the activities of younger guests. "I was born, all those years ago, in Albany."

Among those noted in the gathering were Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Clarence B. Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph T. Harrell, John Clifford Folger, Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. Elizabeth Arnold and many more.

Guests at Resort

Guests at the Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, over Labor Day weekend included Mr. and Mrs. James Henry and their two sons, Pearson Henry and Meredith Henry, and Judge Evan Howell of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Demaree and Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Fusell of Chevy Chase.

Latin American Beauties Shine at Venezuelan Party

By Elizabeth Maguire

In honor of Romulo Betancourt, former President of Venezuela, a small reception was held yesterday during the cocktail hour at the Venezuelan Embassy. The Ambassador and Senora De Carne Jall received their guests informally in the air-conditioned drawing room.

Although it was a small gathering, it was apparent that there is no shortage of Latin-American beauties in the Capital. A dark-haired, handsome woman is Senora de Corominas, wife of the Argentine Ambassador to the Organization of American States. She was there, smartly dressed in an alllblack costume.

Brown-eyed Senora de Vellergas, wife of the Colombian Ambassador to the OAS, wore becoming beige satin and brown feather hat. Miss Josefina Blanca, a student here, wore a striking costume of navy blue satin and small hat of pale blue tulle.

Another beauty, Senora de Mora, wife of the Uruguayan Minister, topped her black satin frock with long white fur stole, and Senora de Limares Aranda, wife of the Counselor of Guatemala, was a pretty picture in black lace ballerina and pink tulle chapeau.

The Ambassador of Peru, Alfredo Ferreyros, was a guest, as well as the Colombian Ambassador, Gonzalo Restrepo-Jaramillo, and the Bolivian Ambassador, Don Ricardo Martinez Vargas. Members of the embassy staff who attended included the Minister Counselor and Senora de Falcon-Briceno, the Counselor and Senora de Alvarez-Chacin, the Assistant Air Attache and Senora de Ramirez, and Senora Olga Briceno.

Then there were the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, Mrs. Casas Bricena, Senorita Luisa Perez-Muro, Senorita Maria Elena Restrepo, daughter of the Colombian Ambassador, and Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Mills of the State Department.

Miss Betty Alvord Honored at Tea

Miss Betty Pierpont Alvord, bride elect of William Richard Loweth, was given a shower and tea yesterday by three of her bridesmaids, Miss Corinne Heurich, Miss Eloise Richberg and Miss Nancy Needham. The party was at 5:30 o'clock at Columbia Country Club.

Three out-of-town bridesmaids, Miss Nancy Succop of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Miss Suzanne Grosse of Utica, N. Y., and Miss Lavinia Ann Carothers, also of Pittsburgh, arrived in time for the fete. Mrs. Ellsworth Chapman Alvord, jr., sister-in-law of the bride, was a guest, as were Miss Katharyn Joanne Alvord, sister of the bride and maid of honor; Mrs. Ellsworth Alvord, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Elias Alvord, the bride's grandmother.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Women in Office Are Out of Patience With Newcomer, 18, a 'Baby Vamp' Who Artfully Courts Management and Slyly Maligns Them

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have an 18-year-old "baby vamp" in our office who is gradually undermining the other girls by working her wiles on all the men and implanting in their heads, and especially the manager's, that she is being overworked and underprivileged.

These men are for the most part happily married, and of no personal interest to me, as my interest lies elsewhere; but like most married men, they are rather susceptible, and to me it seems unfortunate and unfair that they should be subjected to this girl's pseudo-innocent "kitten rubbings."

Technically I am in charge of the girls, but my authority doesn't extend to "hiring and firing," hence I can't act directly to remove the thorn; and so far we've actually leaned over backward to humor her, feeling that it would be worse than useless to try to protest her tactics to the manager, who has been the special target of her "charms."

Oozes Sweetness if Men Are Near

DORA (I'll call her) always contrives some rather cuddlesome contact with any man who has occasion to be near her, and this is done with a round-eyed air of innocence that simply oozes sweetness. I have learned that she is even "cozier" with the husbands or beaux of her friends outside the office. Incidentally, she has only one close girl friend, a girl who has few dates, I gather.

I have thought of talking with her about the impression she is making, pointing out the damage she is doing, not only to others but to her own reputation; and also explaining that she can never hope to have the friendship of other women, which to me is important in a more mature life, unless she changes her ways.

If she doesn't realize her mistakes, she is well worthy of corrective guidance and might profit by it, as she is intelligent and could be most attractive. Should I make the effort or just let things slide? The other girls are nearing the point of rebelling and the office is going to lose more than one unless she is brought into line. What, if anything, can be done? Please advise. B. P.

Woman Supervisor Is Fence-Straddler

DEAR B. P.: In all probability the girls in the office are as much disgusted with your fence-straddling as they are disturbed by Dora's tricky, tale-bearing, baby-vamp performance.

If you are technically in charge of the girls, it probably means that you supervise—or keep tabs on—their handling of detail assigned them. And in this capacity you are the logical person, in fact it's part of your job, to probe sources of friction over work, smouldering in the ranks, and call disputants to account in sorting out the truth or falsity of conflicting claims.

Why have you shirked this plain obligation? It is my guess that Dora is the first rival for management's ear that you've had in years, and you're almost afraid to cross swords with her, lest it develop that she has power to cut your throat.

Don't Underestimate Men's Intelligence

BUT that's being silly; it's underestimating the hard core of common sense possessed by your male confreres. As married men they know the facts of life, and while they may enjoy Dora's cuddling, they feel little respect for the girl (especially the teen-ager) who behaves so. Thus if consistently confronted with tiresome evidence that she is being equally shabby in other aspects of her behavior, I'm sure they'd vote "thumbs down" on her, rather than lose reliable self-respecting employes.

In your dealings with Dora, it would be poor diplomacy to take her aside for "heart-to-heart" talks, which she might use against you and the other girls, translating them into cock-and-bull stories confided to management in maliciously comic, wide-eyed-wondering vein that depicted you-all as a bunch of anxious jealous busybodies.

Rather, treat her objectively, without display of emotional interest or personal tension. Be alert for instances of repercussions of her unsporting or ill-bred tactics, and administer verbal discipline then and there, in the form of a brief forthright reminder that she's in error, or creating a bad impression, or whatever; then quietly report the incident to management, telling what you've said to Dora and why. M. H.

He's A Big Boy Now

Don't Mar School Days With Tears

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It's commonplace in fiction and fact for a mother's eyes to be blurred as she watches her young hopeful skip off to school or kindergarten. Going to school is a milestone and illustrative of the inexorable passing of time.

But the blurring is only for the mother to know about, not for the child. This entrance into the new and joyful life of school should not be marred by this divorce from the parent's immediate presence. Growing up, being independent, having the companionship of persons outside the home, these are the privileges of every human being and it is tragic when he is denied them.

The children to be pitied are those who must go everywhere with mother; the ones whose lives and interests are just an extension of hers.

Perhaps at no time can the mother show her mettle so plainly as when she allows the child to go to school alone, not with her hand clasped in his.

One of the first steps in letting go of the child is to allow him to take the responsibilities for which he is ready. At five years of age he should have learned to cross the streets safely. He exults in this indication of his bigness and if he is not too dependent on the parent will long to be out from under her protective wing.

Each new act the child accomplishes alone is a triumph for him as a person and a personality. Parents have to be protective in so many ways in this complex civilization, that it is well for them to recognize how essential it is to give the child an opportunity to act independently when it involves small risk.

Let him be happy when he goes to school alone, not with her hand some because he has left home and mother behind. Let him have the fun of going alone, matching steps with small comrades, watching traffic guides.

As you wipe away that furtive tear at this loss of your "baby," be rejoiced that he is well, that he is independent and does not suffer from separation from you. That is the right, the wholesome way for him to be.

A Screw Driver

A small screw driver should be in the cutlery drawer to pry open those removable can covers, such as on shortening, molasses, etc. After you have installed this handy little gadget you will suddenly wonder why it is you never break kitchen knives any more.

In Need of Repairs

The picture whose paper back has become torn and loose will soon have dust and discoloration on the face of the picture unless a new heavy paper back is put on to replace the torn one. It takes only five minutes, plus a piece of laundry paper and a little paste.

For Fall Costumes

Calicoes in dark green, brown or black with tomato accents make a bright fabric for use with the heavier cottons such as velveteen or corduroy and are interesting when quilted. They are adaptable for clothes for all ages and are as suitable in children's dresses as in blouses and petticoats for the coed. Patterns vary from mosaic effects to florals and demure strawberry prints. They range from the antique colorings of 100 years ago to modern's taste, reports the Cotton-Textile Institute and the National Cotton Council.

Transplanting

Before putting the plant into the new flower pot, soak the pot in water over night. Then transplant the plant and the moisture needed to fill the pores of the pot will not be taken from your plant. If this is done the transplanted plant will rarely wilt even for a day.

Ask Anne — About Making Potato Salad

Would you please give me the quantity of potatoes, celery, onions and eggs to make potato salad to serve 275 persons? Also, I would like to make the salad dressing. Could you give me a good recipe for salad dressing for so many persons? B. T.

The amounts given allow ½ cup servings for each of 275 persons:

24 quarts diced potatoes—or 45 to 50 pounds.

9 quarts celery, diced—or 15 to 18 bunches depending on size.

9 cups onions, diced—or approximately 5 pounds.

3 to 4 dozen boiled eggs.

If you do not wish to use the amount of celery specified, you can reduce it, increasing the potatoes a corresponding amount. Also, you can use less or more eggs depending upon the amount of money you have to spend.

It will take approximately 6 quarts of salad dressing for this amount of salad. A recipe for that amount follows:

Cooked Salad Dressing

2 cups flour	15 eggs
½ cup salt	4 quarts milk
4 tablespoons dry mustard	4½ cups vinegar
1 teaspoon pepper	1 cup margarine or butter
2 teaspoons paprika

Mix flour, salt, mustard, sugar, pepper and paprika. Beat eggs; add. Gradually add milk; cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until thick. Add vinegar and margarine; cover. Cool. If you do not have a large enough double boiler to cook the entire recipe at once, divide, cooking half of the recipe each time. To avoid scorching, be sure to cook over water.

Can anyone tell me where I may find the value of two very old lithographs—both in excellent condition? They are "A Saint James's Beauty," painted by Benwell, published September 8, 1783, by E. M. Diemor, 377 Strand; and "A Dance of Boy Angels," painted by Van Dyck, published January 1, 1788, by John and Joseph Boydell, 90 Cheapside. E. F. F.

The appraiser at an art gallery on 13th st. will be able to give you the value of your lithographs. Call him at Metropolitan 1130.

I'd like to know the proper place for a silver tea service in my dining room. It's old, and consists of the following: Tea pot and little larger pot for hot water, spoon holder, sugar dish, cream pitcher and silver tray. I have a buffet and a server, which is the proper place? And is the tea pot ever used for serving coffee? I used it once when I was serving supper at little tables in the living room and wondered if it was proper for coffee? At present the service is on my server and am thinking of getting electric candles for the buffet. If it should be placed on the buffet, what would I use on the server? A. G. T.

Because of the size of your silver service, I would suggest that the buffet would provide a better place to display it than the server. Instead of the silver on the server, you could use a lovely vase with flowers or vines, a potted plant or a decorative bowl. In order to have the server easily available for use during meal time, the decorations on it should be kept small in number.

If the tea pot is not so tiny that it would be impractical for serving coffee at parties, by all means use it for that. If the larger pot has a lid on it, possibly it would serve as a coffee pot. As a matter of fact, in the sets which have two pots, the larger one is usually considered the coffee pot.

Will you print a recipe for Roquefort cheese dressing that is not an oily dressing? I have eaten the creamy kind and find it more delicious than the one in an oily mixture. D. B.

Thin ½ cup mayonnaise or snappy boiled dressing with one tablespoon thin cream, in 1/3 cup grated Roquefort cheese and season to taste with salt and paprika.

I have several dolls which I want to give away at Christmas. Some need faces refinished, heads mended, etc. They were expensive dolls at one time and I would like to have them in good condition before I give them away. Who does this work? G. H. D.

There is a doll hospital on 19th st. which does this sort of work. They can be reached by calling Republic 1126.

Will you give me a recipe for grape juice from Concord grapes, if it can be successfully made at home? L. M. S.

Wash sound ripe grapes. Cover them with water and heat slowly to simmering. Do not boil. Cook slowly until the fruit is very soft, then strain through a bag and add ½ cup of sugar to each quart of the juice. Pour into clean fruit jars. Put on cap, screwing firmly tight and then back half a turn if you use the lid with a rubber. With self-sealing jars, screw tight. Place in hot water bath and boil 15 minutes. Remove from water bath and complete the seal. The sugar may be omitted from this recipe and the juice used later to make grape jelly.

FLORIDA LIMES are plentiful now and nothing makes a tangier thirst quencher on a hot day. To make sparkling drinks like those pictured here, combine 1½ cups lime juice, ½ cup sugar, 1 quart of sparkling water, and ice. Mix sugar, lime juice, and crushed ice together until very cold and frosty. When ready to serve add sparkling water, mix well, and garnish with lime slices. You will have six glasses full of the sparkler.

Variety of Recipes for Using Sour Cream

Sour cream can be used to make a variety of sauces or dressings, hot or cold, for many of the vegetables now plentiful on markets and in gardens, cookery experts of the United States Department of Agriculture remind housewives.

If cream happens to turn sour, as it sometimes does in hot weather, it should be used promptly, never wasted. Either "home-soured" cream or the sour cream especially prepared by dairies and for sale in many city markets may be used in the following recipes:

Fried Tomatoes With Sour Cream Sauce. Sliced tomatoes, dipped in egg and crumbs and fried to a golden brown on both sides, are extra good dressed up with sour cream sauce. After lifting the fried slices to a hot platter, sprinkle a couple of tablespoons of flour over the fat left in the pan, mix well, then pour in a cup or a cup and a half of sour cream. Stir and cook slowly until thickened. Season with salt and pepper as desired. Then pour the hot sauce over the tomatoes on the platter and serve at once.

Hot Sour Cream Sauce. This sauce is especially good with cooked broccoli, cauliflower or potatoes. To make enough for six servings, blend 1 tablespoon of butter or other table fat with 1 tablespoon flour. Then add 1 cup sour cream and ¼ teaspoon salt. Heat slowly and stir until thickened. Cover and cook over hot water for about 5 minutes. Finely chopped parsley, chives, or red or green pepper may be added to give color and added flavor.

'It's a Date'

"IT'S a date" for Betty Foy of Anacostia High School, who is pictured in one of the date dresses she will model in today's "Calling All Girl's Fashion Show" at the Silver Spring Armory. Betty's frock is of forest green wool, cut with a "V" weskit effect on the bodice to give the waistline a trim, slim look

Theme of today's show, presented by The Hecht Co., is "Smooth as a Senior." Miss Nancy Pepper, editor of Calling All Girls magazine, will be commentator. Pat Young, recently chosen as Washington's Teen Queen, in a city-wide contest, will be a featured model, along with more than a dozen girls from local high schools. The show will begin at 11:30 a. m. and admission is free

Washington Dean Says

Marriage, Courtship Courses Needed in High School

Was marriage the most important decision you ever made?

If so, did you ever study the subject: How to fall in love?

If the answer to this last question is no, a Washington educator thinks a vast mistake has been made.

Dr. James Harold Fox, dean of education at George Washington University, has been making speeches to teachers. He has stressed that education should be something the kids can use. Today he amplified these speeches.

"Education should be functional," he said. "We should be taught things we can use in everyday life. If we don't use it, we forget it."

Since it's on a lifetime basis, marriage should be taught in the schools, Dr. Fox thinks.

"For most schools," he said, "homemaking means teaching home economics; sewing and cooking. That is important, of course. But I still think the big problem is social—how to get along with each other in the family."

That's why he thinks every high school should have, in the eleventh and twelfth grades, courses in which forming of friendships, courtship and marriage could be discussed.

"Remember," he said, "that many of those girls are going to be married soon after they leave high school."

Sooner than that, Dr. Fox says, there should be some attempt to help the youngsters solve their social problems. In the seventh and eighth grades, he believes, discussions should be held on making friends, dating, hours (how soon should a youngster come home at night?), formal parties.

Earlier still, he says, should come sex education.

"It should start when the child is very small," he said. "Say, two years old, or even younger. Then it can be a continuing process."

Dr. Fox admits that this will take time, that no school can plunge right in without first testing the functional water. Warns Dr. Fox:

"No school can get too ahead of its community."

What to Serve

A delicious salad to serve with a fish dish is one made of pickled beets, onion rings and shredded lettuce or romaine; pour a tangy French dressing over the salad when the fish dish is ready.

For a quick dessert fry bananas in a fritter batter and serve sprinkled with confectioner's sugar, cinnamon and with a dab of sweetened whipped cream.

An easy way to prepare fried onions to accompany hamburgers or liver is to cut medium-sized onions into one-quarter-inch slices and separate into rings. Dip the rings in milk, then in flour, and fry in shallow fat.

Add 1 cup of diced cooked beets and 2 cups of diced cooked potatoes to 2 cups of chopped corned beef; now mix in a half cup of milk, a little grated onion and salt and pepper to taste. Melt butter or margarine in a skillet and cook until browned.

PEACH CRISP (For Two)

Ingredients: 1/3 cup sifted all-purpose flour, ¼ cup butter or margarine, 1/3 cup brown sugar (firmly packed), dash of salt, 2 medium sized ripe peaches (½ pound).

Method: Put the flour, butter or margarine, brown sugar and salt in a mixing bowl. Using a pastry blender, mix together until well combined. Peel peaches, halve and pit; slice thinly into two individual shallow baking dishes; cover with the crumbly flour mixture, sprinkling it evenly over the fruit. Bake in a moderate (375 F.) oven until the peaches are tender and the topping is a golden brown, about 20 to 25 minutes. Serve with thin cream.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Statistics Indicate That We're All 'Furriners'

Richard Barkey of 2024 Monroe st. ne. seems to have become population conscious since he became a papa recently.

Dick points out that census figures show that only one out of every three District Liners was born in Washington.

Two out of three are "immigrants" who came here from Virginia (21 per cent), Maryland (13 per cent), Pennsylvania (9 per cent) and various other States.

The figures also reveal such interesting things as these: There are more people here from Hawaii than from Nevada; more from Mississippi than from populous California; more from the Carolinas than from nearby Maryland.

And, contrary to the belief fostered by people who tell Truman jokes, little more than 1 per cent of the immigrants came here from Missouri.

MATTER OF VIEWPOINT

Mr. Stassen's charge that the President is a demagogue recalls the definition that "a demagogue is a forceful speaker for the opposition who is enjoying an annoying amount of success in winning votes."

MISCELLANY

Ewarts Restaurant on 13th st. has a slick trick worked into its sign, which alternately shows two advertising messages. The first cycle lights all the letters, and spells "Ewarts." The second cycle lights only the first, third and fifth letters . . . A. Melville Cox of 120 Aspen st., Chevy Chase, Md., is busy figuring the odds against a repetition of this coincidence: Son Bill found a crusty old fork in the rubble at Buzzard's Point. When Mom was finished cleaning and polishing it, the fork turned out to be sterling silver—with Pop's 3-letter monogram on the handle . . . My rough-and-ready calculation is that the odds were 17,575 to 1 against finding the exact 3-letter monogram—and if I'm wrong again, I'll no doubt hear from the mathematicians . . . Erwin A. Wollstein of 3516 A st. se. suggests that Capital Transit needs a better proofreader. A sign in Bus No. 4291 spells it "Constitutoin" ave. . . . Ruth L. Benson of 3630 37th st. nw. tells me that the Wisconsin ave. Hot Shoppe mural was done by Nelson Davis, "a local boy who made good and is now living up in Connecticut" . . . Positively the first New Year's Eve announcement to reach this desk advertises the All States party to be held in the Shoreham Ballroom . . . How can people plan winter parties when it's still so warm?

PERSONAL NOTES

Betty Alice Fife, 46 Fort dr., Alexandria, Va.: I don't know what "a real gone kitten" is, either; I just list them as I get them, and use quotation marks to indicate that the descriptions are those of the donors. If pressed for a translation, I would guess that "real gone" is jive talk for "cute."

NOTHING TO SNEEZE AT

Frank Gladwell of 505 N. Garfield st., Arlington, Va., says he's not going to attend the finals of the Miss America contest this year.

His stepdaughter, Jody Miller, was chosen Miss Washington of 1948 and is now in Atlantic City, ready for the Big Day.

Pop would like to be on hand to cheer her on to victory, but he thinks he'd better stay away—because he considers himself a jinx.

He says every time he's been out front when Jody appeared before the public, something went wrong. Things like sneezes in the middle of a song, for example.

So Frank is going to do his cheering from a safe distance, and perhaps it's just as well.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I work in the postoffice of the House of Representatives. A friend of mine is musically inclined, and plays the piano and organ. But there's no piano or organ in the Capitol, and my apartment is too small for one.

So we wonder if some District Liner who has such instrument would permit us to do some practicing once a week. It gets sort of lonesome here, away from home and all our relatives, especially since we work seven days a week. So we'll appreciate anything you can do for us.

H. Elmo Taylor
511 B st. se.

Dear Elmo:

How do you manage to work such a tough schedule? I thought that only housewives work seven days a week.

Bill.

NEW YORK.—Bill Buckner, who is being sought by the New York District Attorney for having arranged the Parke ave. "charity" gambling party, expected to make headlines that week, but for an entirely different reason. Buckner served a stretch in prison because of his involvement in the Philippine bond fraud case. On the day before the penthouse gambling story broke, he retained a New York lawyer to bring suit against the United States Government for false imprisonment. He claimed to have proof that his conviction and imprisonment were unjust—that he was completely innocent of any wrongdoing.

Valentin Parera leaves for Chattanooga this week to appear in the will-contest suit brought by the family of his late wife, Grace Moore . . . Parera, incidentally, was fascinated by the story of the cab driver who last week turned in a wallet containing $5000 in cash and who received only $30 reward from the loser. "I never thought such honesty was possible," said Parera. "Such decency deserves a better reward." He sent the cabbie a check.

Mildred Fenton tells the story of a young lady who went to a resort booking agent and said: "I have a unique act. I have six legs. With two of them I dance like Bill Robinson, with two like Ray Bolger and with the other two like Eleanor Powell—all at the same time" . . . The agent stopped yawning . . . "I also play the harmonica and juggle three balls with my other hand," the six-legged lady continued. The agent seemed interested . . . "And while my three pairs of legs do those three dances and I play the harmonica and juggle three balls," the lady added, "I balance a ball on a stick atop my head. How about it?" . . . "What I want to know," replied the resort agent, "is—will you mingle?"

Helen Hayes, now starring in "The Glass Menagerie" in London, expects to end her run there in November, to return to New York to fulfill some radio commitments . . . A television expert reports that under the present allotments, if the maximum number of stations start telecasting they will reach only 99 million televiewers. Forty million Americans are outside the television ranges and cannot be reached.

Pauline Betz, the tennis champ, who will marry Sports Columnist Bob Addie of Washington, received a letter from him inquiring about the size of her left-hand ring-finger . . . Miss Betz didn't know the size. The tennis champ showed her ring-finger to several people, but none could tell her what size it is. She therefore measured her finger with a circlet made of tennis-gut, and mailed it to her husband-to-be.

Merry-Go-Round

Chiang Envoy And M'Arthur Talk in Tokyo

While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.

General MacArthur is holding quiet conferences in Tokyo with a special emissary of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek that may have far-reaching reverberations in Far Eastern affairs.

MacArthur

The emissary is Gen. Chan Chun, former Chinese Premier and a long-time Chiang intimate. Chan Chun stands high in Secretary of State Marshall's esteem. They worked together when Marshall was in China trying to establish a stable government.

While the MacArthur-Chan Chun conversations are cloaked in considerable secrecy, it can be authoritatively reported that three chief items are under discussion:

1. A visit by Chiang to Tokyo for a personal parley with MacArthur.
2. The creation of an anti-Communist front in the Far East.
3. Reopening of Chinese-Japanese trade.

Prospects of Chiang going to Japan are uncertain. His home situation is very precarious. Chinese economy is in a desperate plight, and the Nationalists' military position is little better. Due to Nationalist incompetence, reactionism, graft and treachery, Communist strength and armed inroads are greater than ever before. With Chiang now far from a popular hero, he may find it difficult to return if he should leave China.

Naval Brushoff

Navy chiefs would be well advised to scrutinize the conduct toward reservists of certain regular officers of the Thirteenth District on the West Coast. It smells to high heaven.

While the Navy command in Washington is doing a lot of huffing and puffing about its love of Reservists, these West Coast "hot shots" are treating Reservists like unwanted stepchildren. A certain captain, a commander and a second class class hospital corpsman are particularly offensive. This is the sort of thing they are doing:

A group of college educators, holding war-earned reserve commissions, reported for a two-week tour of duty. All were making a personal sacrifice to do this. The commander in charge of reservist training repaid them for their patriotism by loudly and pettishly informing them that the Navy "already had too damn many professors."

The corpsman, while giving the reservists a physical check, was even more disparaging. And the captain of the ship to which they were assigned acted as if they were plague-bearing pests. Although some of them earn several times his pay in their profession, being in uniform, they naturally couldn't say anything.

But now returned home, they are saying a lot—and it's doing the Navy no good.

Big Question in Russia

The mysterious death of Col. Gen. Andrei Zhdanov has given new impetus to a long-held big question in foreign chancelleries—what will happen in Russia when Joseph Stalin dies

Now, 68, he has been in poor health for several years. Zhdanov was reported to have been one of three potential successors to Stalin. Now that Zhadnov is out of the way, pan-faced Foreign Minister Molotov looms higher than ever as the most likely choice. However, nothing is certain on what will happen in the inner recesses of the Kremlin. Molotov, too, may pine away!

President Truman has it all figured out how he's going after the GOP on the tax issue.

He will charge that the Republican income-tax reduction was part of a secret scheme to foist a sales tax on the country.

As a result of the GOP bill, there is a strong possibility of a federal deficit next year. To balance the budget, the Republicans, according to the President, are planning to jam through a "soak-the-poor" sales tax.

Monkey Wrench

Behind-the scenes, the State Department has just tossed a ripping monkey wrench into one of the President's favorite projects—the St. Lawrence Waterway.

With enthusiastic Federal Power Commission support, New York and Oontario worked out an agreement on the construction of a power dam at International Rapids. This has long been a major stumbling block. The accord was sent to the State Department for what was assumed would be routine transmittal to the International Joint Commission, which has the last word. Instead, State has pigeonholed the agreement.

Irate proponents of the project are charging that secret coal and railroad pressure is behind the State Department's mysterious obdurance.

Flash

Representative George Bender (R., Ohio), is investigating charges of neglect of Negro patients at the Tuskegee (Alabama) Veterans Administration Hospital.
